KING MANUEL FLEES TO A BRAZILIAN SHIP; REPUBLIC PROCLAIMED

BADAJOS, Spain, Oct. 5.—Cipher messages received here to-day, via the frontier, stated that a fierce battle was raging in the streets of Lisbon.

These messages, which escaped the censors, declared that a large proportion of the Lisbon garrison had joined the ranks of the revolutionists, and that the firing was incessant.

It was reported that barricades were erected and that cannon were being used.

Proclamation of Republic.

Other reports said that the revolutionists had taken over the reins of government to-day in the presence of the army, and formally declared Portugal a republic.

The Portuguese capital fell into the hands of the revolutionists at 3 p. m. yesterday.

According to late information the revolutionists are sweeping over the entire kingdom.

King Manuel to-day took refuge on the Brazilian warship San Paulo which brought President De Fonseca to Lisbon recently.

Lisbon Harbor Bottled Up.

Another dispatch says that warships manned by Portuguese revolutionists have closed the harbor of Lisbon, and that not even foreign vessels are permitted to leave.

It is expected that the arrival of British warships in the harbor at Lisbon will result in the establishment of communication between the outside world and the terrorized Portuguese capital.

REVOLUTIONISTS DRIVE THE KING FROM HIS THRONE

PARIS, Oct. 5.—The Portuguese monarchy has fallen.

Lisbon, the capital, fell into the hands of the revolutionary mob at 3 p. m. yesterday.

King Manuel, according to the latest report, fled from the palace while a raging mob was storming it, and shells from rebel Portuguese warcraft in the harbor were raining upon it, and took refuge on the Brazilian gunboat, San Paolo.

The revolution to-day is sweeping the nation, and the conflagration threatens any minute to sweep over the border and engulf the neighboring kingdom of Spain.

Army and Navy Revolt.

The Portuguese army and navy are reported to have raised the green and blue standard of the republic.

Emissaries of the revolution are reported to be in all the principal foreign capitals prepared to enter into early negotiations for the establishment of diplomatic relations with the new government.

Three British warships are steaming at top speed to Lisbon to protect English interests, and it is believed that within forty-eight hours an international war fleet of great porportions will have the Portuguese capital under its guns.

Spain is reported to be upon the crater of a seething volcano. While the Spanish army is wavering in its allegiance, the revolutionary party, composed of republicans, anti-clericals and terrorists, is momentarily expected to rise, and Alfonso and his advisers are reported to be making desperate efforts to prepare for a last stand.

Gunboats in Harbor Surrender.

Messages received here by wireless, courier and telegraph, stated that the revolution broke in all its fury shortly after 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon, although there had been rioting and sporadic outbreaks of violence long before.

No sooned had the fighting commenced than the soldiers flocked into the ranks of the rebels, and the commander of the Portuguese gunboats in the harbor surrendered in a friendly fashion.

All through the afternoon and night fighting continued. Although many residents desired to flee from their homes, the rebel leaders stationed soldiers at all roads leading out of the city and prevented the refugees from getting out of the capital.

Revolution Bulletins

BARCELONA, Spain, Oct. 5.—The Spanish Government is to-day strengthening all of its garrisons throughout Catalona and the censorship on all news is being enforced with the utmost vigor.

LONDON, Oct. 5.—It is reported that Marquis de Coveral, Portuguese minister to Great Britain, appealed to-day to the foreign office to intervene to save King Manuel. Naturally no official confirmation of this is obtainable, but the report is generally believed.

LONDON, Oct. 5.—Spanish bonds fell forty points on the Bourse to-day. Portugese bonds declined very rapidly, with practically no buyers.

SANTANDER, Spain, Oct. 5.—The palace at Lisbon was bombarded by warships from the Tagas and was finally captured by the revolutionists, according to a wireless message received here to-day from the German steamship Cape Blanco.

LONDON, Oct. 5.—"Lisbon has fallen and is now completely in the hands of the republicans, and King Manuel has escaped aboard a warship." This message was received by a Brazilian merchant here this afternoon from Cintra, a Portuguese town ten miles from Lisbon, where one of his agencies is located.

BERLIN, Oct. 5.—The Berliner Zeitung to-day received a wireless message from Lisbon, declaring that all the Lisbon forts and all the warships in the harbor have been in the hands of the revolutionists since yesterday afternoon and that the republican flag is flying over them.

LONDON, Oct. 5.—The Central News Bureau says there has been continual fighting in Lisbon since the initial shot of the revolution was fired. Bloody conflicts are now raging throughout the capital. Hundreds have fallen in the struggle for liberty.

HAMBURG, Oct. 5.—Private dispatches from a frontier point in Portugal say traffic was stopped on practically all of the Portuguese railroads at noon yesterday. Revolutionists refused to allow the moving of trains.

LONDON, Oct. 5.—An official dispatch this afternoon says that warships manned by Portuguese revolutionists have closed the harbor of Lisbon, and that not even foreign vessels are permitted to leave. The British cruiser Newcastle arrived at Lisbon this afternoon.

FITZGERALD PULLS OUT; FOSS BOOM IS RENEWED

A new and startling turn in the Democratic gubernatorial situation came at noon to-day when Mayor Fitzgerald was forced by Martin M. Lomasney to take his hands off the political fight and to let the convention that meets at Faneuil Hall to-morrow absolutely alone, followed by the backdown of Chairman Macleod of the Democratic State Committee as an advocate of District Attorney Pelletier and his assertion that he is for Foss, and that Foss will be nominated on the first ballot.

FOSS OPENLY DECLARES CANDIDACY.

Shortly after this climax was reached in one of the hottest ante-convention situations Boston ever saw, Congressman Eugene N. Foss issued a statement, and for the first time since the campaign opened declared that he was a candidate for the nomination for Governor.

The elimination of Mayor Fitzgerald as an active force in the convention was brought about by the most aggressive action that Mr. Lomasney could bring to bear on the mayor. Only a fight to a finish between these two big Boston Democrats was averted by Fitzgerald declaring that he would quit and lay down his hand.

"I'm out of it—my hands are off," declared Fitzgerald shortly after noon. "Regardless of that, I think Pelletier would sweep the State."

The new light seen by Chairman Macleod at noon was one of the biggest surprises of the day. He declared that he was not only for Foss to a finish, but that no eleventh-hour candidate could come in to interfere with Foss, no matter who proposed him.

At the headquarters of Charles S. Hamlin a statement was issued in which it was declared that Hamlin will be nominated on the first ballot.

Meantime, the Hamlin boom continues to gain strength. Boston delegations, one after another, are climbing on the Hamlin band wagon. From the Vahey camp comes the statement that the outlook never was better.

Many Conflicting Rumors.

All sorts of rumors were rife to-day at Democratic State headquarters, No. 15 Beacon street, at the headquarters of the various candidates, at Young's, where the Mayor is established, and at the Bellevue where candidates, their managers and backers and politicians generally make little junkets.

The abandonment of Foss by Mayor Fitzgerald was first announced by Chairman Fred Macleod of the Democratic State Committee. Macleod's announcement followed soon after the visit to the Mayor by James Duncan of Quincy and John Golden of Fall River, labor leaders, and their ultimatum that they would not support Foss under any circumstances.

Following is the latest from the Hamlin camp:

"The Hamlin campaign has been run solely for the purpose of presenting his claims for the nomination. The candidate has himself talked to the delegates and early outlined his platform for their information.

"Public Demands Hamlin."

"His services as arbitrator in labor disputes, which have brought about incerased wages and decreased hours of labor to over 6,000 men in this State, have secured for him the indorsement of employers and employes alike for the justness of the decisions at which he has assisted.

"The Hamlin victory belongs to the Democratic party as a whole. No campaign machinery—no matter how elaborate—could have brought the remarkable indorsement of Mr. Hamlin to the present state, were it not that the public itself was demanding his nomination."

Following is the latest statement from Vahey:

"Thomas F. Cassidy of Adams has been chosen to nominate James H. Vahey at the Democratic State convention. Mr. Cassidy is a particularly able speaker and one of the best known Democrats in the State. He served with Mr. Vahey in the State Senate.

"From reports received at the Quincy House rooms of Mr. Vahey yesterday, by letters from delegates and from other sources a number of additional votes in the convention were assured.

Openly In Field.

"The Hamlin forces, by a species of 'cuckoo campaign,' are now seeking to occupy a Democratic nest, every twig and binder of which was put in place by others than the candidate, and in whose construction I have played, I trust, a man's part during the last few campaigns.

"Since the beginning of the present campaign Mr. Foss has been the openly reluctant candidate whose 'mouth was bandaged' by his unsought pledge to me not to oppose me as a candidate. I have from the first been frankly and openly in the field, refusing all conditions or combinations, and urged on by the advice and support of the every-day vote-as-they-think Democrats—men who believe that fealty to party means something—in both candidate and party adherent.

"I have fought the fight and my strongest supporters to-day are the men who have fought in the ranks with me—not deserting the colors in time of stress only to come out when victory seems assured. I am not one of those who 'can't come back'—I have never 'gone.'"

BRIDE VICTIM IN TRAGEDY WAS WED FOR SPITE

PROVIDENCE, Oct. 5.—Jealousy inspired Robert H. Robinson to shoot John H. Schnellbacher in the head and leg last night and then murder his wife and commit suicide. Schnellbacher has been operated on at a hospital and will live, unless a victim of blood poisoning.

The story he told his mother while he lay in the hospital is that he went to the Robinson home on Mawney street last night in response to a message from the young wife, which read: "For God's sake come up here. Grace." Robinson, he said, met him at the door and said: "I am not myself to-night, Jack." Schnellbacher went in and there was a quarrel, which terminated in the tragedy.

Had a Lover's Quarrel.

After he was shot Schnellbacher crawled on his hands and knees into the room where Mrs. Robinson lay and he says her last words before she fell into his arms and died were, "Oh, aJck!" Previous to the shooting Schnellbacher had said that Robinson had threatened his wife with a revolver and that she had told him that she would leave him.

Mrs. Schnellbacher, the wounded man's mother, says her son first met Mrs. Robinson about two years ago and that they were engaged until about a year ago when they had a lover's quarrel. She met Schnellbacher by appointment one day in a department store and left him for a moment to telephone Robinson.

When Robinson arrived in taxicab she got into it and rode away with him to be married, leaving Schnellbacher standing there. After her marriage Mrs. Schnellbacher says that Mrs. Robinson called almost daily at her hose and with tears would complain of ill-treatment at the hands of her husband, saying he was constantly drunk.

Threatened Wife's Life.

"I said to her," said Mrs. Schnellbacher, "'Gracie, you made a great mistake in not marrying Jack, my son.' She replied, 'I didn't make any mistake. I did it for spite, and I shall never be happy again until I get with Jack.'"

Yesterday, according to Mrs. Schnellbacher, Mrs. Robinson called upon her and said her husband had lost his job and was home drunk. "I never can live with him another minute," she said.

NEWPORT STARTS A HARBOR PATROL

NEWPORT, Oct. 5.—Because of fishermen and lobstermen entering and leaving Newport Harbor at all hours of the night and in the early morning hours working their snorting gasoline engines, a patrol has been established about these waters which will report violation of the law night and day. The patrol is fitted with fast naphtha launches.

PASTORS MEET IN LYNN.

LYNN, Oct. 5.—About 100 Congregational clergymen and laymen held a conference in the North Congregational Church here to-day as representatives of the South Essex District. The Rev. George L. Parker of Salem called the meeting to order. One object of the conference was to discuss the question of equalizing appropriations for missionary work.

OLDFIELD TO GO FOR RECORDS AT BOSTON MEET

Boston is to have a motor track race on Friday, October 14, held under the sanction of the American Automobile Association, and under the auspices of the Bay State Automobile Association. The local organization is confident that the meeting will be a success.

Barney Oldfield, the most daring driver on the American race track, has been induced to compete in special events and to go for all records from one to five miles. Oldfield has always felt that the Readville track in one of the fastest in the country, and it is here that he has made some phenomenal records, never failing to attract a large attendance and make things interesting.

The big event for that day will be a one-hour race, in which Oldfield will drive his Knox Giantess, and it is hoped to secure Livingstone of the National, Mulford of the Lozier, and one or two other big cars. The Fiat would enter if it were not for the fact that they are to compete in the Grand Prize race the day following the meet at Readville.

The five-mile events will be held for all strip stock chassis of the several classes under the A. A. A. ruling. There will be a five-mile handicap race in which Oldfield in his big record-breaking Benz will be scratch.

GUILTY MOTORMAN CAUGHT IN FLIGHT

STAUNTON, Ill., Oct. 5.—John Lierman of Staunton, motorman of car No. 11, who fled after confessing that he was responsible for the wreck near Staunton in which thirty-six lives were lost, was arrested at Carlinville, Ill., to-day.

NEW HAVEN, Ct., Oct. 5.—Yale wound up her season of mid-week football games to-day by meeting Tufts. Yale presented a team almost entirely of substitutes. Not one of the first-string men of last season was in the lineup, even Captain Daly retiring. He turned over the running of the eleven to Pop Corey, who was used at quarterback.

Experiments were made in the cases of several new players. Jim Reilly, who was used at fullback last Saturday, went to end rush; York, a newcomer, was used at guard, and Coates was given left end. Deming, who won his spurs by his fine punting last season, was continued at left halfback.

Because of the four periods and long waits it was decided to call the game at 2:30 o'clock.

In three games Yale has had three sets of officials, deciding to pick the set for the big games from those who give best satisfaction. Fred Crolius of Villanova umpired the Syracuse game last Saturday, and allowed flagrant violations of the rules which prohibit shoving players and diving tackles. His chances for getting a big game appointment will be spoiled if he is as lax in discipline as he was Saturday.

Joe Pendleton, who officiated in Yale's big games last year, came for the first time as referee to-day. J. A. Hatch, formerly of Williams, was head linesman, and Harry A. Fisher of Columbia, field judge.

REVOLUTION IN SPAIN FEARED BY THE VATICAN

ROME, Oct. 5.—Reports from Portugal to-day centered the fear of the Vatican upon the Spanish situation and it was believed that the trend of events meant revolution in Spain.

Anxiety is felt here for the Safety of the aunt of the King, Maria Pia, Queen Dowager of Portugal.

No direct reports from Lisbon were received, the Vatican gaining its information from newspaper bulletins which were submitted to Pope Pius as fast as they came in.

Pope Pius wept when ews oft he Portuguese revolution was broken to him. Retiring to his sanctuary, he knelt in prayer and asked God to spare the lives oft he royal family. He was deeply affected by the meagre news from Lisbon.

The Pope setn a message to King Manuel to-day through the papal nuncio at Madrid, whom he instructed to deliver the telegram if there was any possible manner in which it could be odne. The message contained the Pope's blessing and gave him assurances that the Vatican would never support a republican form of government in Portugal. The pontiff expressed the hope that the Roman Catholic clergy would remain faithful to the monarchy.

MOTHER TO APPEAL TO THE PRESIDENT

An appeal to President Taft is to be made by Mrs. Celia Hubbard of Everett, whose petition for the release of her son, Edwin H. Hubbard, who is confined at Fort Warren, was denied by the Circuit Court. Hubbard is serving a sentence for desertion from the United States Army. Mrs. Hubbard claimed that the State Board of Charity wrongfully granted her son permission to join the army when he was sixteen years old, and that he was justified in deserting to support her.

NEW YORKERS GET CHELSEA P. O. JOB

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—The Treasury Department awarded to Conroy Brothers of New York, a contract for the construction of the new postoffice building, at Chelsea, Mass. Work will begin at once, and the building will be ready for occupancy by December 1, 1911.

AMERICAN LEAGUE GROUNDS, Washington, Oct. 5.—The Senators greeted the Red Sox with expressions of joy when they arrived on the field to-day.

They felt sure that in the state of debility the Red Sox are now in, everything would be easy for a win. The reputation for losing games had preceded them into town, and the Senators settled down to have a picnic.

It was evident, at the same time, that P. Donovan has had a word or two to say to some of the men, and that unless they put up a much better game some of them would find themselves in bush leagues when the season opens next year.

SMITH COLLEGE GIVES DEGREE TO MRS. HOWE

NORTHAMPTON, Oct. 5.—The feature of the inauguration as president of Smith College of Dr. Marion Le Roy Burton, here to-day, was the conferring of the degree of Doctor of Laws upon the venerable Julia Ward Howe of Boston, who was present at the exercises. The same degree was also given to Jane Adams, the social worker, of Chicago.

As a special tribute to Mrs. Howe the school sang the first stanza of her Battle Hymn of the Republic. In the tribute to Mrs. Howe, which accompanied her degree were these words:

"Julia Ward Howe, poet and patriot, lover of letters, advocate of great causes of humanity and liberality of humanity to whom she has read a fiery gospel writ in burnished rows of steel; now in her serene graciousness and venerated age we offer our sincere congratulations and pay her deserved homage."

The degree of Doctor of Science was conferred on Ellen Richards, head of the department of domestic science at "Tech" in Boston.

MRS. HASKELL EMERY'S BRIDE; ON HONEYMOON

The announcement to-day of the marriage of Howard B. Emery and Mrs. Mineola Spencerly Haskell recalls a romance that started in the Winthrop Yacht Club and on the smooth waters thereabouts and a subsequent disruption of two homes that resulted in suits for damages for the alienation of affections and for divorces that proved sensational when they were aired in the courts.

The families of Samuel C. L. Haskel and Howard B. Emery were very chummy. The two men were fellow club members. The two wives were friends. Both families were prominent in Winthrop and Medford. Then came a rupture. Mr. Haskell got a divorce from his wife. Mrs. Emery got a divorce from her husband.

Married in Roxbury.

All that took place early in the year of 1908. It was expected that Emery and Mrs. Haskell would get married, and they have.

The wedding took place at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Rebecca T. Spencerly, at No. 367 Walnut avenue, Roxbury, on Saturday. The Rev. Charles A. Fulton of the Dudley Street Baptist Church performed the ceremony. A reporter called at the Spencerly home to-day and talked to the mother of Mrs. Haskell.

"Are your daughter, Mrs. Haskell, and Mr. Emery married?" she was asked.

"Yes, they were married last Saturday."

"Where are they?"

Haskell Wedded First.

Emery is employed by the New England Telephone Company at No. 101 Milk street. He is a stocky looking man of more than forty and wears a mustache tinged with gray.

Haskell, who gained his freedom through the courts from his wife, was married again before his former wife was. He surprised his friends by being wedded to Miss Anna L. Driscoll of No. 7 Copeland street, Roxbury. They were married in the First Universalist Church of Medford.

When Mrs. Emery got her divorce she was given $10 a month alimony. Haskell voluntarily agreed to pay his wife $50 a month when they were parted by the courts. The Haskells had a son who was given into the custody of his father.

OVERDUE SCHOONER MAKES CUBAN PORT

The four-masted schooner J. C. Strawbridge, well known in this city, has arrived safely at Cienfuegos, Cuba, from Philadelphia, after a voyage of forty-nine days. Head winds and calms combined to delay the vessel, and fears were expressed that she had been overwhelmed in a tropical hurricane.

SHOE STOCK IN BIG SALE

The many in which the stock of the Welch & Landregan Shoe Company of Lynn is to be disposed of in Boston to-morrow is interesting the genral trade. Go down Summer street way to-morrow and look at the display in the window at No. 40 and you will be equally interested.

The entire Welch & Landregan stock is being sold by Sheinwald. The stock is ordinarily high priced, but you wouldn't think so after you looked at the tags attached to the portions of the stock that Sheinwald is selling. The line offered takes in every kind of men's and women's footwear. The sale, which is a special one, starts promptly at 8 o'clock.

It is safe to say that with the inducements offered the greater part of the stock will be sold early. With this in mind the Sheinwald management has provided for those who cannot get into the city to attend the sale and have provided to fill all mail orders with accuracy and speed. Anyway there is always the satisfaction of knowing that you can get your money back if your not satisfied.

WYMAN FAMILY REUNION.

FROHMAN PLAYS WILL BE FIRST OFFERED HERE

Charles Frohman has perfected his scheme to make Boston equal in rank to New York as a producing centre for his plays. He is in Boston to-day to make the final arrangements.

The Boston Theatre, over which he has exclusive control, will be the scene of the Frohman productions. Although an old theatre, it is one of the largest playhouses in America. It will be a sort of workhouse for finishing off special productions that will be built, rehearsed and performed for short engagements at this same theatre.

The reason for the adoption of an outside city for certain openings is that New York stages and theatres are at present so congested that it is impossible to produce plays on a strictly accurate schedule.

Theatres Are Overcrowded.

At the present time, for instance, Mr. Frohman has fifteen plays that he is obliged to withhold for lack of theatres in which to produce them, or, in fact, even rehearse them. Not only is every Frohman theatre being utilized for rehearsals, but many outside halls as well. The manager hinted at his present plan some time ago, and he has been working on the details steadily for the past few months.

The first of the plays to have its opening in Boston in accordance with the new scheme will be the Sir Arthur Conan Doyle detective play, "The Speckled Band, an Adventure of Sherlock Holmes," which had a long run in London at the Adelphi Theatre last season.

The piece will open in Boston on October 25, and the preliminary rehearsals start in Boston to-day. Edwin Stevens and the rest of the company of fifty is now in Boston, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle has cabled to Charles Frohman that he will be present on the opening night.

Boston Producing Centre.

The new plan will not necessitate any new stage director, for William Seymour will have general charge of the Boston productions as well as of those in New York.

Mr. Frohman was seen at the Hotel Touraine to-day, soon after his arrival.

"I am going to make Boston a producing centre for my plays on the same basis as New York and Chicago," he said: "I had planned to open with a new play here October 1, but owing to arrangements that had been made while I was in Europe, 'Girlies' was put on this week.

"During my trip through Europe I purchased a number of plays, and now that Klaw & Erlanger have stricken from their books the Henry W. Savage productions, which I have taken over, I find that I need another producing center. I have always had a kind feeling for Boston, and when I took over the Boston Theatre a year ago last February, I expected to start at once on the plans to make this city a producing center. However, other matters have interferred until this time.

Charges Treachery.

"I have met with some treachery from New England managers. Some whom I nurtured and backed and, in fact, gave them a start in the business, have sold out, so that I am determined now that none of my plays after being produced in Boston shall be allowed to go on the New England circuit.

"On October 24 I plan to present at the Boston Theatre 'The Speckled Band; an Adventure of Sherlock Holmes,' which I purchased from Sir Arthur Conan Doyle.

"Other plays which will be opened here will be 'The Foolish Virgin,' 'The Mystery of the Yellow Room,' and a spectacular production foundrd upon the story of Cinderella. These are but a few of the plays I have in mind for presenting in Boston.

"I hope to place the Boston Theatre in the same relative position in the East and Middle West that the new Blackstone Theatre enjoys in Chicago, whence it sends out successful plays to the Western States and the Pacific Coast."

Mr. Frohman will make his headquarters in Boston until November 1.

KNIGHTS PLAN SHAFT FOR ARCHBISHOP

The Knights of Columbus are to erect a bronze monument in this city as a memorial to Archbishop John J. Williams, the first prelate of that rank in Boston. The orgual model of the statue made for this purpose by Sculptor Hugh Cairns is now on view in the Mechanics Building Art Gallery. The monument will cost $30,000 and the memorial was planned and is being executed by the John J. Williams Council of the order. The model is a bust four feet six inches high and it is to have an imposing base in the form of a granite obelisk with steps and an exedra upon which there will be an angel in kneeling pose and with outstretched wings. The model will be borne on a float in the Columbus Day parade.

RESTELLI HEIR OF MOTHER HE KILLED

Charged with the murder of his mother, a fugitive from justice, with a reward offered for his capture, dead or alive, Louis G. Restilli of Quincy nevertheless is held to be entitled to his proportional share of the estate left by the mother he murdered, under a ruling made by Judge Flint at the Norfolk Probate Court in Dedham this morning. The estate is valued at $3,000 in the administration papers allowed by the court, and Louis is named as one of the heirs. Judge Flint allowed the claim.

NEWTON POLICE GIVE UP FIGHT FOR RAISE

The committee of six Newton patrolmen appointed to ask for a raise in pay for themselves and their comrades has disorganized. The committee when appointed by the Newton Police Association was told to "wait on" the Mayor. They never did. The reason assigned for failure to do their duty is that the Mayor a week ago would not show his hand in regard to the increase in salaries for the members of the department. Rumor had it that he would oppose the request. So the committee decided not to call at the Mayor's office in the Town Hall.

WELCOME TO PAPAL LEGATE IS ARRANGED

Cardinal Vannutelli, Papal Legate, will come to Boston next Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock. He will be the guest of Archbishop O'Connell.

A grand banquet and reception will be tendered the distinguished visitor on Saturday evening at the Hotel Somerset by the Catholic men of the city.

The Cardinal will come from New York on the train that leaves there at 10:02, and will alight at the Back Bay station. He will be met by the members of the Cathedral Guild and escorted to Archbishop O'Connell's residence on Granby street.

After a few hours' rest, Cardinal Vannutelli will go to the Somerset for the banquet and reception. Following the banquet there will be several speakers. It is expected that Gov. Draper will make an address welcoming the cardinal in behalf of the State, and Mayor Fitzgerald will deliver an address of welcome in behalf of the city of Boston. District Attorney Joseph C. Pelletier will speak on behalf of the Catholic laity and the Marquis Bouthillier Chavigny will make an address in French. Archbishop O'Connell, it is expected, will deliver an address in Italian and then Cardinal Vannutelli will reply.

On Sunday morning Cardinal Vannutelli will go to the cathedral of the Holy Cross to assist at solemn high mass. The cardinal with Arbishop O'Connell will leave the latter's residence on Bay State road at 9:45 o'clock, and they will be escorted to the cathedral by the uniformed members of the fourth degree of the Knights of Columbus. There will be no reserved seats in the cathedral except for the pew holders. The mass will begin at 10:15 o'clock.

After the service the cardinal will proceed to the Notre Dame Academy on Berkeley street, where he will visit the members of the tabernacle society.

From the academy the cardinal will be driven to St. John's Seminary in Brighton, where at 1 o'clock he will be the guest at dinner. There will be solemn benediction in the chapel at 3 o'clock. After that service the cardinal will meet the priests of the diocese.

STARR LECTURES HERE.

A talk about the Philippines by Professor Frederick Starr of the University of Chicago will be given next Sunday afternoon at the Twentieth Century Club. The Anti-Imperialist League is sponsor for the lecture.

LAWSON GAZES ON HEINZE AS HE TESTIFIES

Thomas W. Lawson attracted considerable attention in the Suffolk County Superior Court to-day when he appeared at the hearing of the securities suit brought by F. Augustus Heinze against A. D. F. Adams and others. The case was resumed before Master F. Rockwood Hall. To-day was the 125th since the hearing of the suit opened.

Mr. Lawson was not drawn to the court room by subpoena process, but attended simply because he is interested in the case and wanted to hear the testimony that was offered. He sat through the hearing to-day, occupying a seat to one side and in front of Mr. Heinze, the plaintiff. He watched Mr. Heinze closely. The latter was on the witness stand under cross-examination by Attorney Boyde B. Jones, counsel for the defendants.

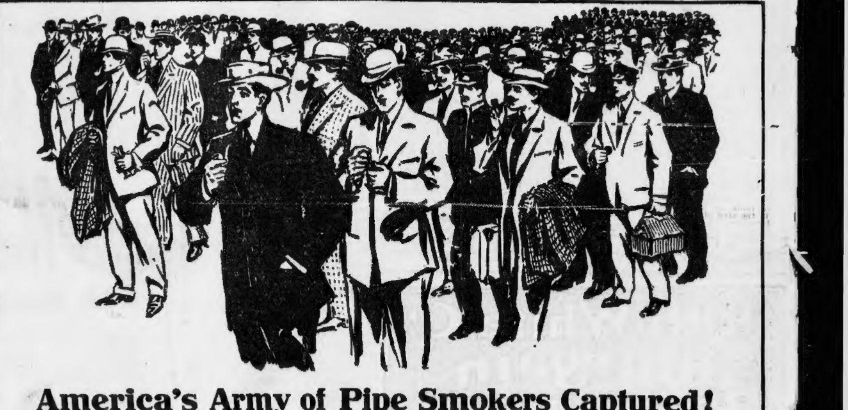
The testimony to-day had to do with the notes which are featured in the case. The plaintiff said that he borrowed $300,000 of Adams and others, giving as collateral stocks and bonds to the value of $600,000, and is suing to secure $300,000 worth of collateral.

Asked by Attorney Jones if he had erased any of the words in the notes he signed, Heinze replied in the affirmative. He said he had made the erasures for the purpose of protecting himself. Witness said he believed Adams is a responsible man; that the notes witness signed were worded in such a way that witness would be fully protected in the transaction with the men of whom he borrowed the money.

Heinze said he understood that if he violated the substance matter of the notes the holder could sell the collateral stocks and bonds, provided that whatever surplus was left would be paid back to himself.

Explains the Receipts.

Witness was handed several receipts signed by Adams. One of these Heinze said he had never seen before. He explained the nature of the receipt by stating that Adams had taken some securities without making any payment of their face value and that a receipt telling this had been received by him. He stated further that in case the face value were paid another receipt of a different kind would have to be substituted for this first receipt. Heinze said that while the transaction had been made under his own instructions, it had really been made by men in his employ.



America's Army of Pipe Smokers Captured!

Baron's Pipe Filler

GENTLEMEN:—You who haven't already bought one of these Pipe Fillers—get one. And get it right away. Get it for your own sake. Get it because it multiplies your smoke pleasure and pays for itself in the process. Don't doubt. Don't be skeptical. No chance for that. You can see for yourself, if you read this advertisement, that Baron's Pipe Filler actually makes an entirely new thing of pipe smoking.

How It Improves Your Smoke

With scientific and mechanical precision, Baron's Pipe Filler loads tobacco into your pipe in such a way that the shreds of tobacco stand upright in the bowl. Think of it! Instead of being a tangled, knotted, lumpy mass, your tobacco burns lengthwise—exactly as in a cigar or cigarette!

Of course, as you can see for yourself, this gives the perfection of free drawing and free burning. And it is free drawing and free burning that make a pipe-smoke cool and sweet and delicious.

Besides—this new and perfect way of filling your pipe means a Dry Smoke. For the draught is so perfect that nicotine cannot collect in the pipe. Nothing but a dry, white ash is left after each smoke. No wet, repulsive residue of wasted tobacco.

It is the wet, foul pipe that is unhealthy. Every smoker wishes he could smoke dry. Here's the way to do it. A Baron-filled pipe is dry, clean, sweet and free from harmful effects.

How It Improves Tobacco Flavor

The main advantage, of course, is in actually improving your pipe's smoking qualities. But Baron's Pipe Filler does far more.

In filling a pipe the old way, you disarrange the blend as soon as you empty the tobacco from its tin into your jar or pouch. The Baron way is different.

Each "cartridge" contains in itself—and holds intact—the precise proportions of the blend of tobacco. Thus each pipeful gets the perfect mixture with all its richness and flavor.

The "Cartridge" of Tobacco. Each shred lies straight as in a cigarette. Exactly a pipeful. No waste. Contains and holds intact the right mixture for each pipeful.

In the Baron-filled pipe, the tobacco burns lengthwise as in a cigar or cigarette. In the hand filled pipe, it is a knotted, uneven mass—burns badly and draws badly—collects nicotine at bottom of bowl.

How It Saves You Money

The avoidance of waste means a big saving. Every shred of tobacco is burned. You get more smoke from each pipeful—there are no "shorts"—and you lose no tobacco in filling. The net result is that you actually get 13 pipefuls to an ounce as compared to only 10 in the old way—a saving of nearly 20 per cent.

And—Mind You—Baron's Pipe Filler Costs Only 30 Cents

The enormous rush and demand for this new discovery has swamped the factory. So only two kinds of tobacco have so far been put up in "cartridges." These are Craven Mixture and Black Cat Mixture—two of England's best-known and best-liked brands. Craven Mixture: 1½ oz.—30 cartridges—30c. 3 oz.—40 Cartridges—60c.

The Best Smoke-Money You Ever Spent

Don't stop to "think it over." The cost isn't $30—it's 30 cents. And you're taking no chance. This will be the very best "buy" your love of the weed ever called for. Make that "buy" today.

MUTT'N JEFF OFF ON LONG OATMEAL TRIP

Won't there be a clash of wits when the funniest team in America hits the land of the thistle, where humor runs dry and keen as a new-honed razor?

Won't Laird Mutt look bonnie in kilts! One can hear Mickle Jeff (Scotch for Little) saying to his side partner:

"Hey, laddie, but ye're unco braw in in th' plaidies."

Both Mutt and Jeff are practicing up on Scotch dialect. Jeff is strong on "spierin,'" "muckle" and "frae."* But Mickle Jeff put over "a-gley," "sae" and "feckless loon" on Jeff in the same sentence, and Jeff has been "unco fashed" about it since.

On the level, Mutt and Jeff are going on the oatmeal circuit. It happens this way. Mrs. Catherine Ritchie of No. 29 Webster street, Somerville, sails next week Thursday, October 13, for Glasgow to visit her parents and the "auld countree." The Mutt and Jeff book which Bud Fisher is to distribute through the BOSTON AMERICAN will not be ready to issue until October 15, as already announced. But Mrs. Ritchie is keen on taking a Mutt and Jeff book with her. So she wrote this letter:

Editor Boston American:

Dear Sir—Having noticed your announcement that the Mutt and Jeff series is about to be published in book form, I would feel more than obliged if you would kindly let me know if I can have a copy on the 12th of October, as I sail for Scotland on the 13th, and would like the book for company on the voyage, also to give to my parents as a treat as soon as I arrive. Yours truly,

CATHERINE RITCHIE.

Then with true Scotch wit, Mrs. Ritchie added:

P. S.—I shall save all the coupons up to the 12th, so, for the love of Mike, Mutt, be reasonable.

To-day Mrs. Ritchie, speaking of her letter, said:

"I have never seen anything quite so funny and, I am sure, not half as entertaining as those two little fellows. Every letter that I have received from my parents in Scotland since I began sending them clippings has contained some reference to the doings of Mutt and Jeff. We have our own characters in Scotland, who have been exploited as really funny, but, my word, they are not to be compared with Mutt and Jeff for real wholesome fun, and so I am very anxious to have the new book which the BOSTON AMERICAN is going to give its readers on October 15 with me when I leave for home.

"I know that the distribution does not begin until that date, but I am hoping that I may arrange to get a copy before I start, and I am sure that, under the circumstances, your editor will be willing to let me have one. I would almost feel like postponing my sailing just to have that book to take with me."

Now "reasonable" would be Mutt's middle name, if he had one. He and Mickle Jeff delight to oblige a lady. They will see to it, with the aid of the BOSTON AMERICAN, that a copy of Bud Fisher's inimitable book is in Mrs. Ritchie's hands before she sails for Glasgow. This special arrangement is made for the emergency created by Mrs. Ritchie's departure being two days ahead of the time anounced for the Mutt and Jeff book to be issued.

Meanwhile the readers if the BOSTON AMERICAN at home are preparing to get their copies of the Mutt and Jeff volume on the 15th, as announced daily in the BOSTON AMERICAN.

But think of Laird Mutt and Mickle Jeff in the land of the thistle.

"Hoot, mon!"

(Note—If Mutt and Jeff go to any other durn dialect district they will mosey around in plain United States talk. Supposing they went to Russia? What a dialectoritchskyoff!)

ASKS BUILDER BE RESTRAINED

Franklin W. Fairbanks was to-day ordered by Judge Richardson in the Suffolk Superior Court to appear Friday to show cause why an injunction should not be issued against him as petitioned for by Fred E. Crawford. The latter seeks to have Fairbanks restrained from proceeding further with the erection of a building in Watertown.

Crawford claims that the will of his uncle, Calvin D. Crawford, gave the income of his property to his widow during her life, and provided that at her death the property should go to the heirs at law, one of whom is the plaintiff. Mrs. Crawford died August 20. Her nephew declares that on December 12 last, she conveyed real estate in Watertown to the defendant, when Mrs. Crawford, the plaintiff alleges, was of unsound mind.

BROOKINS' FLIGHT IN MISSOURI CANCELLED

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 5.—The proposed flight of Walter Brookins from Springfield, Illinois, to St. Louis, Missouri, next Saturday has been peremptorily called off by the Aero Club of St. Louis. The announcement that no flight would be made followed a disagreement between officials of the local organization and the Springfield Fair Association.

MISS ELKINS HOME; WON'T WED ABRUZZI

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—"I am coming home to be an American."

This statement, made by Miss Katherine Elkins after her arrival from Europe on the North German Lloyd liner Wilhelm der Grosse, indicates that the charming young daughter of the West Virginia Senator has definitely decided to turn her back upon the persistent Duke of the Azruzzi and his royal rank.

Although Miss Elkins refused to enlarge upon this brief statement, given to an American reporter upon the dock in Hoboken, her words admit of but one meaning—the famous international romance, which has interested two continents for three years, has come to an end. There will be no wedding.

Had Miss Elkins decided to accept her royal suitor she would have been forced to accept Italian citizenship. "I am coming home to be an American" can be taken therefore for more than its face value.

Party Depressed.

Accompanying Miss Elkins were her mother, Mrs. Stephen B. Elkins, and her brothers, Stephen B., Jr., and Davis. The entire party, with the exception of Elkins, Jr., seemed strangely depressed. Particularly was this so of Miss Elkins. She seems to have lost a great deal of the vivacity that made her the leader of Washington's youngest set a couple of seasons ago. She appears thinner, too, than when she went abroad two months ago.

Coming up the bay the Elkinses, who were booked in the ship's passenger list as "Frau Ellis and familie," kept close to their staterooms.

"We have been away two months and have spent most of our time in the south of France," was the message Mrs. Elkins sent out to the reporters.

The Elkinses went to the E section as soon as the boat docked, and there the fair young West Virginian was found. She was attired in a blue toque hat, a dark blue suit, modish white gloves, a feathery gray fur and a blue veil hid her face.

"Maliciously False."

"Pray, excuse me!" exclaimed Miss Elkins, hurriedly, when the inevitable—"Have you decided to wed the Duke?" was sprung. However, she consented to glance over a newspaper article which had been cabled from Paris, and which stated "on unquestionable authority" that the wedding was to be solemnized in February, that Miss Elkins was to embrace Catholicism, and that a dowry of $5,000,000 was to be paid by Senator Elkins.

Miss Elkins's face colored as she perused the part about the marriage portion. She bit her lip, and then exclaimed with her first show of vigor:

"That is false and maliciously so."

Another cablegram to the effect that the Duke had broken down royal opposition and that only her own consent remained to be won to make the match an actuality, was treated with contemptuous silence by Miss Elkins.

MME. NORDICA OFF TO SING IN PARIS

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—Mme. Lillian Nordica sailed on the Kaiser Wilhelm II. for Europe to fill an engagement at the Paris Opera House, where for the first time she will sing in "Tristan und Isolde" on October 18. Her husband, George W. Young, the banker, was at the pier to see her off. "I am to sing in French," declared Mme. Nordica, "but it a pity that no one seems to want to hear opera sung in English."

LABOR COST DRIVES AWAY LYNN FIRM

Foster, Williams & Co., shoe manufacturers of Lynn, employing 175 hands, have closed their factory and will go out of business. The president of the company, C. P. PATTEN SEES REAL PERIL IN MAD CHASE AFTER LUXURIES

"Everybody wants an automobile and a yacht nowadays," Mr. Patten said, "and he will move the earth to get them. Unfortunately the vast majority of persons cannot afford such luxuries and they skate on pretty thin ice in order to get them. It's only a question of time till a lot of them break through at the same time and they will make a splash that will go around the country. The only hope of avoiding another serious business depression lies in stopping the present mad pursuit of luxuries and uncalled for show."

PORTUGAL'S ANCIENT MONARCHY OVERTHROWN; MANUEL FLEES

AMID A HAIL OF SHOT, BOY MONARCH ESCAPES TO A BRAZILIAN WARSHIP.

Many Reported Dead.

The information that the short and bitter revolution in Portugal had resulted in victory for the insurrectionists and that the Portuguese army and navy had departed from the royal standard and joined the uprising was brought to this city to-day by automobile from the frontier. Many are reported dead, not alone in Lisbon, but in others cities where outbreaks of violence occurred simultaneously with that in the capital city. Fighting between detachments of loyal troops and the revolutionists is still going on. It is impossible to estimate the number of dead. Judging from the vague reports, the toll may exceed 1,000.

A wireless report received from Santander stated that warships of the Portuguese Navy had hauled down their own colors and raised the flag of the republic, then begun a bombarding of the entire city. According to this report, the green and blue flag floats above the arsenal, the barracks and many public buildings in Lisbon, as well as over the palace.

City Taken by Surprise.

One meagre report, which is supposed to have been received by wireless at the Spanish coast frontier and telegraphed here, said that the royal bodyguard had remained loyal to the imperial family, and that a severe engagement had taken place while the troops were defending the King and the Queen mother from capture.

The revolt was so carefully planned and its attacks were so sudden and bitter that the city of Lisbon was taken completely by surprise. There had been no attempt to align troops in strategic positions to repel such an uprising, although there had been mutterings since early in the Summer, when the break between the Vatican and the Portuguese government took place. Apparently the present insurrection was the direct result of the murder of Professor Bombarda, a Republican deputy and a bitter factionist in the anti-clerical ranks. Professor Bombarda was shot by a lieutenant in the army. He died yesterday, and news of his death caused a wave of intense feeling and acrid enmity to sweep over Lisbon. Crowds of Republicans, armed and frenzied with excitement, thronged the streets in the vicinity of Bombarda's home.

Public Buildings Attacked.

The cry was taken up all over the city. The Republicans gave vent to their accumulated feelings of hate. Men hastily armed themselves and formed into bands which attacked churches and public buildings. Soldiers and gendarmerie were hooted and jeered. Barracks were erected of timber and stones in the Plaza.

Apparently the revolutionists had become emboldened enough for any enterprise. They threw off all disguise. The moment for the blow had come.

From the tumultuous marches through the streets and the breaking of windows the first blow was struck when soldiers were sent to disperse the mob. A pitched battle ensued.

According to the reports received in this city, many of which are vague and contradictory, many of the police and soldiery deserted the royal standard immediately after ascertaining the real strength and feeling of the revolutionists.

In the meantime the streets were filling with frenzied men and the roads leading into the city were choked with hurrying throngs, eager to join the revolutionary movement. The mobs were armed and menacing.

Cheer Revolutionary Colors.

The blue and green banners of the republicans commenced to bob up above the mobs in many quarters. Every time a revolutionary flag was raised aloft a cheer would go up and some fresh enterprise suggested.

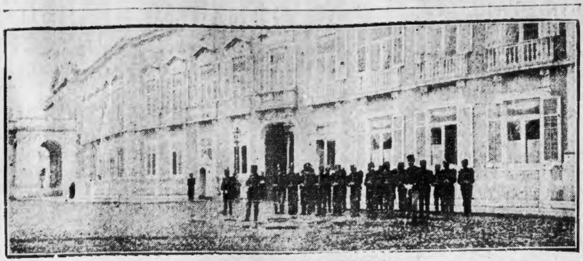
The army of the insurrectionists was apparently well led and the plans were well made.

Many of the men were equipped with modern firearms, and as the stories from Lisbon and Oporto and other cities were pieced into a connected narrative it was made more and more evident that the master hand of the Paris agency which had financed the Spanish revolution played a part in the Lisbon uprising.

Detachments of the Revolutionists surrounded the barracks, the royal palace and the customs house and naval quays almost simultaneously. Terms were dictated and it is reported that King Manuel was told that he must abdicate his throne or suffer the risk of remaining in a turbulent republic.

Warships turned their guns on the city and sailors who had been shouting "Long live the king," but a short time before, scowlingly hauled down the Portuguese flag and trampled it under foot then cheered lustily while the flag of the insurrectionists was raised to the peak.

The ships which had betrayed the Braganza Government then drew off from the city. The decks were cleared for action and the men prepared as if they were going into battle.



MANUEL'S FATHER ASSASSINATED IN FEBRUARY, 1908

King Manuel's father, Don Carlos, then ruler over Portugal, and his brother, Crown Prince Luiz, were assassinated on February 1, 1908, in the streets of Lisbon, on their return from a sojourn at the King's estate at Villa Vicosa. The Queen and the Infant Manuel were in the carriage with them when they were shot.

Manuel, though struck on the right arm by a bullet from a carbine, showed his pluck by whipping out a revolver and discharging it at the assassins. The Queen, with a gallantry that has since clung brightly to her name, threw herself toward her two sons at the first shower of bullets, shielding their bodies with her own, and struck out frantically at the murderers with a bouquet of roses she was carrying. She escaped injury.

Because of the beautiful weather that day, an open carriage was in waiting at the railroad station in Lisbon for the royal party. When they took their places there was the most respectful silence, and no hint of the tragedy so soon to be enacted.

As the carriage bearing the King and his family turned into the Dua Jo Arsenal there was a cracking of guns and a shower of bullets tore their way into the bodies of the King and the Crown Prince. There were six of the assassins. They ran with astonishing boldness right up to the sides of the vehicle and poured in a hail of lead before the stupefied escort could intervene.

The King and Crown Prince, half rising, fell back bleeding into the cushions of the carriage. Almost before the police knew what was going on, the assassins had emptied their guns and turned to flee into the crowds. Then the King's mounted guard charged upon them, pursuing them down the street and riddling three of them with bullets. The others were made prisoners.

The only one of the regicides of any standing was Manuel Bulca, a sergeant in the cavalry and a teacher in an elementary school. He was killed. The other two who were shot down were store clerks.

Manuel was proclaimed King of Portugal by Premier Franco, two days after the assassinations.

PRETENDER QUITS ITALY; MAY BE ON WAY TO PORTUGAL

PARIS, Oct. 5.—It is reported here that Dom Miguel of Braganza, pretender to the Portuguese throne, has left Italy, where he has been in exile, and is on his way to Lisbon.

A very strict watch has been kept at Viareggo, Italy, on the pretender for months to prevent his departure, but it is supposed he has eluded the observers.

ALFONSO'S THRONE IS ALSO MENACED

MADRID, Oct. 4.—The whole Iberian peninsula, comprised of Spain and Portugal, is seething with revolutionary spirit to-day. The latest reports from Lisbon are to the effect that the rebels hold practically all the capital and that the monarchy is doomed.

Spain, already torn by internal warfare and rioting, is making desperate preparations for a final stand against the onrush of republicanism. Troops are being hurried to every strategic point. Garrisons are being strengthened and double guards of cavalry and artillery are patrolling the frontier. Advices of rebel successes in Portugal are suppressed as far as possible.

Headquarters in Paris.

In political circles it is known that the same agency with a Paris headquarters which financed the recent Spanish uprising, which is still simmering, also stood financially behind the revolution in Portugal. The bitter strife in Spain, dating back two years, culminated in the recent religious rioting, which in turn had led to the direct promise of civil war unless King Alfonso promises to abdicate and throw the government of Spain into the hands of the Republicans.

King Alfonso and his Cabinet are making their preparations for a final stand to-day. Their plans are being kept as secret as possible, but the heavy movement of troops throughout all last night and to-day are sufficient evidence that they expect at any minute to face the same ordeal that overwhelmed Manuel across the border.

Hourly Bulletins on Border.

The fortunes of internecine war have linked the monarchies of Spain and Portugal in a common cause. While the developments of to-day as portrayed in highly censored reports indicated that Portugal is practically a republic now, King Alfonso, heartened by his stern advisers and buoyed up by the centuries of sentiment in the divine right of kings, is determined that Spain will be shattered in war before he will abdicate or see his government transformed.

The loyalty of a great section of the Spanish army is in doubt. The War Minister was instructed to scatter the loyal troops amongst those whose allegiance to the crown is doubtful.

It was reported that in some quarters outbreaks occurred on receipt of the news from Portugal. In Madrid extra police precautions were taken. The civil gendarmes were reinforced with soldiers and machine gun batteries were made ready for instant use.

Menacing crowds in the streets were dispersed and many arrests were made. From the north and south came rumors which gave the general situation a gloomier hue and added to the dangerous attitude of the radicals in this city.

CLIMAX OF SERIES OF PLOTS AGAINST LIFE OF YOUNG KING

PARIS, Oct. 5.—The present revolutionary uprising in Portugal is but a culmination of a long series of plots against the throne and the King.

There have been countless conspiracies against the life of the young King. One of the most dangerous occurred in April, 1908, two months after the assassination of King Carlos.

So great was the danger then that thousands of troops bivouacked in the streets and machine guns guarded every approach to the royal palace.

More than fifty rioters were slain and 200 wounded in the terrific street fighting.

Hundreds of political arrests were made and the jails of the city were crowded.

The assassination plot, which the police claim was laid by Republicans, was then declared to have been aimed not only at the death of the King but all his cabinet ministers and the establishment of a republic.

OVERTHROW OF MONARCHY WAS LONG IMPENDING

Manuel II was nineteen years old at his accession, the youngest reigning monarch in Europe. He was educated in the palace under distinguished instructors, and at the age of fourteen entered the navy as a midshipman, having risen to a lieutenancy by the time of his accession. He went to England in the Autumn of 1909, and the British press, although without any official announcement, insisted that the purpose of his visit was connected with a betrothal to Princess Alexandra, daughter of the Duke of Fife.

If that was his errand it was unsuccessful. November of the same year found him in Paris. While he was there a French general was killed by an Algerian, said to have been insane, and it was suggested that his deed was a misdirected attempt to kill King Manuel or President Fallieres, who were near by when the attack was made. After the death of his father, King Manuel issued a proclamation announcing that he would uphold the constitution and preserve the integrity of the condition.

Rumors of the overthrow of the monarchy in Portugal have been current for a long time. In fact, the voice of dissension has not been silent since King Manuel ascended the throne after the assassination.

In addition to serious dissensions over political matters, Portugal has been on the verge of a rupture with the Vatican, a fact that has led to serious conflicts between the Clericals and anti-Clericals. The Vatican has taken occasion to deny the seriousness of the trouble between it and the Portuguese Government, and also asserted that no Clerical plot existed for the overthrow of the monarch.

It was added by a Vatican official that the presence in Portugal of Alejandro Lerroux, chief of the Republicans in Barcelona, Spain, had led the Vatican authorities to believe that the circulation of such reports had been instituted by Lerroux in order to give the Republicans a pretext for attacks on Catholics.

WILL GET NEWS BY AUTOMOBILES

PARIS, Oct. 5.—The National News Association entered into arrangements to-day with the Paris Matin, the great French newspaper, to establish a system of automobile couriers between Lisbon and Madrid, in order to secure the first authentic news of the Portuguese rebellion.

The Portuguese revolutionists hold full possession of all telegraphs in Portugal and the meagre dispatches which have been allowed to pass the frontier have been strictly censored. To circumvent the restrictions thrown about the securing of authentic information by the Portuguese rebels, the National News Association and the Matin made arrangements to-day for the most unique news gathering enterprise in the history of journalism.

Racing Autos for News.

A dozen automobiles will be used. Each will carry, in addition to the chauffeur, two persons to handle the dispatches, gather additional data and write the graphic descriptions. According to the plans the information will be carried either from Lisbon or the nearest point in Portugal to Madrid or the nearest available telegraph station across the border in Spain. Arrangements were undertaken, however, to extend the route clear through from Lisbon to Madrid if conditions would permit. The distance between the two capitals is 300 miles, as the crow flies. The route as laid out for the automobile express after allowing for detours is above 400 miles. The automobiles will be used in relays so that not a moment in speed will be lost.

Owing to conditions at the Spanish-Portuguese frontier it will probably be necessary to use unfrequented routes in order to avoid the delays attending inspection.

"Declaration of Justice."

"A declaration of justice," defending the acts of the rebels in Portugal, was issued in this city to-day by Senhor Magelhoes Lima, one of the most prominent of the Republicans in Portugal and the owner of the newspaper Vanguardia, the official organ of the insurrectionists. His statement follows:

"Fatal emergencies occurred after the death of King Carlos. It was hoped that the monarchical party would comprehend the lesson taught in those events, but it refused to read the signs. Instead of taking cognizance of the people's will as expressed by those events, the monarchical party followed with an accumulation of faults and abuses, which provoked the present action against imperial dictatorship.

LISBON IS CUT OFF FROM WORLD

LONDON, Oct. 5.—Hundreds of anxious inquirers thronged the Portuguese legation here to-day seeking information of affairs in Portugal. At the British foreign office message after message was sent to Lisbon, but no reply followed. It was believed at the foreign office that the Portuguese rebels were in control of all telegraph wires. All communication with Lisbon has been cut off for twenty-four hours.

Minister Soveral, representing the Portuguese Government here, could furnish no facts further than those published in the newspapers. Plainly he feared the worst, but would make no comment. He said he was making every effort to get in communication with the Portuguese capital and hoped to be successful some time to-day.

"I have received no official intelligence of any kind, and my only information was contained in dispatches sent to the newspapers," said he.

Sir Arthur Nicholson, under secretary of the Portuguese legation, conferred with Minister Soveral this morning, which gave rise to the report that information had been received confirming the downfall of the monarchy, but was being kept secret. This was later denied by Sir Arthur. A dispatch was received here from Santander, Spain, where it had been picked up by a German steamer after being sent by wireless from a steamship of the line lying off Lisbon, to the effect that the rebels were in complete control of the capital of Portugal.

This message confirmed the earlier report that the city had been bombarded by warships and the royal flag hauled down from the palace. A Portuguese merchant here declared to-day that he had received private advices on Monday that a plot was brewing and that it would break in a few hours.

The British government is reported to have received assurances that there would be no break in the diplomatic relations between Portugal and England in the event that a republic is established. Two Republican Senators, Lima and Relvas, came to London two months ago as envoys of the revolutionists. It was their duty to inform the British Government that Portugal under republican government would continue to recognize existing treaties.

BOMBARDA'S DEATH MAY HAVE STARTED THE REVOLUTION

LONDON, Oct. 5.—The announcement of the death of Professor Bombarda, the Republican deputy and anti-clerical, who was shot by the army Lieutenant Rebello at Lisbon Monday, may possibly have started the revolution. Bombarda was a distinguished educator. He was recently elected to the Portuguese Parliament in the Republican interest. His assailant, according to some reports, was a madman.

A recognized authority in Portuguese affairs, in an interview here, affected no surprise at the news of a rising. He said that the Republican party was thoroughly organized and that everything had been prepared for a bloodless revolution.

CAPT. KING READY TO TESTIFY IN DEFENCE OF HATTIE LE BLANC

Captain Peter King, brown of face, firm of jaw and with a flash of determination in his eyes, is in Boston to-day from West Arichat, Cape Breton, taking up the fight in behalf of Hattie Le Blanc, the seventeen-year-old girl facing trial for the murder of Clarence F. Glover.

The grizzled skipper has visited the girl in the East Cambridge jail, assured her of his assistance, told her that either her father or mother—probably her father—would be at her side during the orde.. of her trial and let her know that many of her old friends in her far-away homeland stand ready to come to Boston to help her if it is deemed necessary.

Two motives impelled the Captain to come here. In the legal controversies over the property of Glover since his murder last November many accusations were made, among them one to the effect that Captain King could tell stories that would not help Hattie Le Blanc.

Captain King indignantly denounces that imputation, and he is here not only for the sake of the little imprisoned girl, but to show his friends and relatives in Boston that the story is untrue.

Ready to Testify.

Captain King will take the witness stand at the trial of Hattie, if he is allowed, and he assured a reporter of the AMERICAN that he would tell a story that would throw a startling light upon the situation that was only partly revealed by the Waltham tragedy and the subsequent public investigations.

"I have come here," said Captain King to-day, "for two purposes. One is to help Hattie Le Blanc and the other is to re-establish my good character. I propose to do both. I have at least fifty relatives in and about Boston, I have sailed into this port scores of times, am known to business men here, and I do not propose to stand by silently and listen to any aspersions on my character."

While the Captain talked there stood, smiling assent by his side, his niece, Mrs. Abram Le Blanc, who resides near Boston. The Captain is seventy, but he does not look it, being of the hardy folk of the sea who live to be a hundred and nothing is thought of it. There is but a sprinkle of gray in his hair. He talks simply, but to the point, and there is a finality about the finish of his sentences that indicates the character of the man who has had to meet emergencies in his battle with Old Neptune that did not permit of dilly-dallying.

Came Voluntarily.

"I came here of my own volition," continued the captain. "I have not been subpoenaed by either side, but I hope that I may be. State Detective Byrnes came up to West Arichat looking up the case. He talked to me and I got the idea that the trial was coming up right away and so I took the boat and train to Boston. It was what I heard from the detective and because of his visit to my home town that I decided to come right away.

"Now about Hattie Le Blanc—I knew her well as a child. For that was all she was when she lived at home. The idea of connecting my name—me a man of seventy and she a girl of perhaps thirteen or fourteen when she was there, is ridiculous. It gives an idea of the carelessness with which statements have been made about this case.

"Hattie was employed at times by a rel- tive of mine. She worked off and on ere for perhaps eighteen months and is paid for it—small wages, of course, comparison with what girls receive here, at she was happy and safe there. We are simple folk up in Cape Breton, but honest. If there are any scandals there they are brought in from the outside. Men of the sea do not permit wrongs done to their wives, their daughters or their sisters—the sea is too near and too deep for that.

"Smartest Girl in Country."

"I recall Hattie more particularly because she was the smartest girl up in our country, just as I have heard she is the smartest girl that the sheriff ever had in the East Cambridge jail. But while she was employed practically in my family, I was not home much of the time.

"Then Hattie left for the States. Mrs. Lillian Glover came up there about two years ago. She brought a breath of the city with her—a flash of fashion—a flare from the world of light and life.

"Mrs. Glover was naturally captivated with Hattie. There were possibilities of development in the girl. Hattie has the French in her that longs for the beautiful in dress. For Hattie to see Mrs. Glover arrayed as only she had seen women in magazines was for the girl to fall rapturously in love with her.

"Hattie could not speak English, but she has an amazing facility in speaking French. She and Mrs. Glover became fast friends.

"'Come back with me,' Mrs. Glover told the girl. 'Come back home with me and you'll have clothes and hats and shoes like mine. You can live with me and I'll pay you, perhaps adopt you.'

"That is the story Mrs. Glover told Hattie. There's nothing wrong about it, either, and so far as I know in most respects Mrs. Glover kept her word to the girl. I'm simply telling you this to show the lure that brought this little girl from her simple home to where she is now.

"Girl Glad to See Me."

"Hattie heard that girls received as much as $5 a week here, too, but I don't know that she was promised that much. So Hattie came to the States. She made the trip with Mrs. Charles Poirier, who is living near Boston.

"And that was the recollection I had of Hattie until I saw her in the East Cambridge jail. What a development! Mrs. Glover was right when she looked at this little girl in Cape Breton and then into the future—she saw Hattie Le Blanc as she is physically to-day—and a sweeter, prettier girl it would be hard to find.

"In the two years that Hattie has been here she has stepped over the boundary that divides childhood from womanhood and she has carried with her that innocent charm that belonged so naturally to her former life. Oh, but Hattie was glad to see me. She was a-flutter with excitement and she deluged me with questions in French: How's mother? How's father? How's the children? When did you see them? Did they send any word to me?

"After she had fired a machine gun of questions like this she allowed me time to answer some of them. I told her that the family were all well and that they had made me promise to go and see her at the first opportunity. They told me to tell her that they loved her just like they did when she was a little girl and that they knew she had done nothing wrong.

Weeps at News from Home.

"Tears sprang into the blue eyes of the girl and she exclaimed softly to herself while I was telling her about her people. Then I told her that either her father or mother would come to her when her trial started. She said that her mother could hardly come, and that is true, because there are six small children to look after. But her father is sure to come if her mother does not.

"Of course that pleased her most. Now she has something to look forward to, because she has been a lonesome little girl, locked up there so far away from home, but they told me at the jail that her cheerfulness never deserted her.

"After we had talked about her people I asked her this: 'Hattie, what does all this mean about coupling my name and yours while you were at home? What does it mean? Who started such a story?'

"Then the poor girl, herself facing a trial for her life, at once showed her solicitude for me and exclaimed:

"'Don't you worry, Captain. I'll stand by you and show them that you are one of the best men on earth and would not injure any one, let alone a little girl. I'll see that you are righted.'

"I told her that that was not what I had come to see her about, as I could look after that little matter myself and that I intended to do so. I told her I was going to help her all I could and she was grateful. She was not worried at all. She looked like a fresh flower shut up that still persisted in growing more beautiful every day."

MRS. R. D. EVANS ASSESSED $77,352

UNITED ISSUES BIG SHOE STOCK

An indication of the amount of money involved in the purchase of the Wonder Worker patents by the United Shoe Machinery Company which closed the litigation between Thomas G. Plant and the United Company, is contained in the announcement that the United has issued $3,480,000 worth of new stock.

The announcement is made in its report to the Boston stock exchange. In it it says that it issued 60,000 new shares. The present market valuation is $58 per share. It is believed that this amount was paid for the Plant patents. It is not believed, however, that the purchase included the Plant factories. Based on their earning capacity of $500,000 a year they are estimated to be worth, therefore, at least $2,000,000. As a matter of fact the Plant factories were purchased by interests prominent in the management of the United Company.

COMMERCIAL RATING FOR GREATER BOSTON URGED AT ASSEMBLY

The need of establishing a commercial rating for Boston that business enterprises seeking a location may see at a glance the advantages offered in Boston was urged today by George S. Smith, chairman of the Committee on Manufactures of the Boston Chamber of Commerce at its assembly in the American House.

Chairman Smith's subject was "Greater Boston." He explained the need that a large city had of a commercial rating to attract new enterprises. Then he showed that government figures based on Boston's population by itself did not show the enormous volume of purchasing power that Boston commanded.

Chairman Smith said in part as follows:

Statistics Needed.

"The stistics of cities published in government reports have the force of commercial ratings. They have much the same significance for the merchant and manufacturer seeking a location for his business as the ratings given in Dun or Bradstreet have for the man investigating the standing of a private corporation. If this rating is low in respect to size and per cent. of increase in population, trade and industry, the city suffers by comparison with rival communities.

If the rating is high, the impression as to the commercial and industrial opportunities which the city offers is favorable and will frequently influence the merchant or manufacturer to locate his store or factory in the new and promising field. There is no denying the fact that cities, like private firms and corporations, have a business rating in the estimate of the country at large, and that this rating constitutes a real advantage or hinderance according as it is favorable or otherwise. For sound business reasons, then a city should make every legitimate effort to secure the highest commercial standing which the facts warrant.

"We, in Boston have failed to do this. The latest census figures give the city proper a population of 670,000 and an annual value of manufactured products less than $200,000,000. As compared with similar figures for New York, Chicago and Philadelphia, this showing seems a poor one. As compared with the actual population and production of the real or Greater Boston, the figures are inadequate and misleading.

No Fear for Comparison.

"How is the merchant in another State thinking of opening a new establishment, going to learn from the census figures that the local market of Boston commands a volume of purchasing power, normally wielded by a million and a half people? How is the manufacturer seeking a new site for his plant to know that within Greater Boston will be found nearly a third of a million workers, possessing every variety of skill and experience, who produce annually nearly $600,000,000 worth of manufactured products, or about three times that reported for Boston proper.

"Such men have neither the time nor inclination to sit down and dig out the real truth as to the manufacturing and commercial importance of Boston. It is high time that we asserted ourselves and claimed the recognition as to size and economic achievement that is rightfully ours.

"To accomplish this no extravagant statements need be made. The plain unvarnished truth as to the real extent and importance of the business community of Greater Boston will be sufficient to correct the wrong and harmful estimate that at present prevails. Once the true proportions of Boston are clearly seen and taken as the groundwork for all discussion of business opportunities hereabouts, there will no longer be any occasion to fear comparison with other cities.

Striking Facts.

"The sober facts as to the condition of industries in Greater Boston are striking and significant. Within the Boston Industrial District the per cent. of increase in the value of manufactured goods during the period 1900-1905 was 29.2 per cent. This was about a third greater than the rate for the Chicago district, nearly twice that of the Philadelphia district and only 3½ per cent. less than the increase for the New oYrk district. These figures show the splendid vitality and expanding power of Boston's industries which would be wholly lost on the man reading in the regular census returns that the value of Boston's manufactured product for the period 1900-1905 increased only 13.26 per cent.

"This last figure is correct for municipal Boston. But it gives no hint of the remarkable growth that has long since been forced to find space and scope in the suburbs. In this five-year period, 1900-1905, while Boston proper increased her industrial proportion less than 14 per cent., the district outside of Boston, making up the industrial district, showed an advance of 42.7 per cent. Now the important fact to note here is that this district, where production has almost doubled within five years, is just as much a part of Boston in an industrial and commercial sense as Roxbury, Charlestown or any other section of the city proper.

"The reason why the country generally doesn't know of this astounding progress is because Boston is not a federated or expanded city like Chicago or New York. Such being the case it is of the utmost importance that some steps be taken to gain appropriate recognition of the essential unity of the Greater Boston District."

IDENTIFY 2 DRUG BURGLAR SUSPECTS

Two young men captured last night by the Dorchester police near the drug store of Charles H. Davis, just after the officers had discovered that the side door of the store had been forced, were to-day identified as James M. Smith, twenty-two years old, of No. 107 Draper street, Dorchester, and Hugh Perry, twenty-one years old, of No. 96 Chestnut street, Brookline. The two are suspected of having held up Charles L. Blake, the Bird street druggist. This hold-up, which netted its perpetrators $16, occurred just two hours before Perry and Smith were arrested. The two men who held up Blake in his Bird street store answer in every way the description of two who held up Patrick J. Flaherty in the Beacon Pharmacy in Somerville the night before.

AMES RENOMINATED; SAYS 'NEW SPEAKER'

"When Congress convenes again, we are going to elect a new Speaker of the House, a Speaker to-day and not of yesterday, and that Speaker will not be Cannon;" declared Congressman Butler Ames at the 5th Congressional District Convention at Lowell to-day, following his unanimius renomination by the Republicans of that district. The declaration was received with marked applause by the sixty-one delegates. At the Republican County convention, held in the same city to-day, C. H. Richardson of Lowell, and Chester B. Williams of Wayland, were unanimously nominated for county commissioners, while District Attorney John J. Higgins was given a unanimous re-nomination for the offices he now holds.

SHARON TOWN NOTES STRANGELY MISSING

SHARON, Oct. 5.—From a strong box in the town safe, which is presumably proof against cracksmen, two promissory notes made out by the town, signed and negotiable, and written for a total of $2,122.50 have strangely disappeared. The missing notes are payable to the trustees of the Sharon Public Library. One is for $500 and dated December 31, 1903, the other for $1,622.45 and dated July 1, 1904. Both bear the signatures of the selectmen and the town treasurer.

LORIMER'S DEPUTY MUST ANSWER ALL

CHICAGO, Oct. 5.—The senatorial committee investigating the election of William Lorimer to the United States Senate to-day ruled that John Broderick, who is accused of being Lorimer's go-between with the men who were bribed, must answer all questions put to him. This will not permit Broderick to decline to answer for fear of incriminating himself, and he will face prison unless he answers. The ruling is expected to apply to Lee O'Neil Browne also.

RESTRAIN HUSBAND IN FAMILY WRANGLE

In the Suffolk Superior Court to-day Judge Richardson issued an injuction restraining Thomas E. Spear from disposing of personal property which his wife, Jessie F. Spear, claims belongs to her. Mrs. Spear who petitioned for the court's order stated that the goods are at No. 25 Winthrop street, Roxbury, in an apartment now occupied by her husband alone.

HALE STATUE FUND IS NOW $6,926.50

The Edward Everett Hale Statue Fund now amounts to $6,926.50. Acknowledgment of this amount was made to-day by the treasurers of the fund, Kidder, Peabody & Co. One of the largest contributers in the past few days was Mrs. Robert D. Evans who gave $1,000.

$1,000 FOR Y. W. C. A.

Boston Young Women's Christian Association is given a $1,000 bequest in the will of Sarah M. Stetson of Brookline, allowed by Judge Flint at the Norfolk County Probate Court at Dedham to-day. The remainder of the Stetson estate, valued at $15,000 in all, is to be divided between twelve nieces, grandnieces, nephews and grandnephews.

WOMAN'S PLACE IS HOME, SAYS VANNUTELLI

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—"The Catholic Church, though very favorable to the working people, cannot approve of the principles of Socialism," said Cardinal Vannutelli in an interview here. "If Socialist leaders were conversant with the principles of the Gospel, the association would have no reason for existence. It seems to me that Socialism seems a very little thing in America, and that is on account of the good position taken by the church here. And the Catholic church is the best barrier against the exaggerations of Socialism. For the social order no church can give better guarantee than does the Catholic church."

The Cardinal became even more serious when asked if the church's attitude toward divorce would ever change. He gave an emphatic and final answer as follows:

"The church will never alter the regulations made concerning divorce, and I think that America's good sense is with the church. The best remedy would be a spiritual consideration of the marriage state before entering it. When there are difficulties Christian virtues should lead innocent parties to seek consolation in the church."

"What is your opinion of women in public life?" was asked. "Should they hold office?"

"I believe, with Pope Pius," he answered, "that the domestic life should be the dream of every woman—the family, the home, the children. The wife at home can do better work than on the public platform."

Then he spoke in a most complimentary manner of America.

"What impresses me most with America is the beauty of the country," he said. "I did not expect to see such grand scenery. Its beauty is far beyond my mental pictures of it, and I see a great future for the American people—better prospects than we can realize to-day.

"In my relations with the people I find the Americans are very good and polite. Their courtesy charms me, but, most of all, I have noticed the great activity of the people. Everywhere there is a bustling life."

Throughout the interview the Cardinal emphasized his words with gestures, exhibiting with hands and shoulders the earnestness which lay back of his conversation.

MRS. RICKER'S CAMPAIGN BIG AID FOR 'VOTES'

INTERVALE, N. H., Oct. 5.—Miss Marion Weston Cottle, a lawyer and suffragist, declares that the candidacy of Marilla M. Ricker for Governor of this State will serve to focus attention on the equal suffrage movement in New Hampshire, a most fruitful field for the work.

Miss Cottle says that there is a strong sentiment in favor of allowing women to vote in New Hampshire, many of the leading politicians being in favor of it. In the course of an interview Miss Cottle said:

"I am glad that Mrs. Ricker has announced her candidacy for the highest office in the State. It cannot but result in great good to the cause of equal rights for women. But I am of opinion that the Attorney-General was correct when he decided that she could not have her name placed upon the ticket for the primary election.

"Whatever the direct outcome of the present attempt of Mrs. Ricker to have her name upon the ticket, it will prove to be one of the greatest educational factors in the equal rights movement. It will call the attention of the people to the injustice existing to-day in the political status of women, and in that way much good will be accomplished.

"People who have never thought of equal suffrage are thinking of it now, on account of the publicity of her candidacy. And when the people begin to think sooner or later the problem is solved, and solved right.

PORTUGAL'S ANCIENT MONARCHY OVERTHROWN; MANUEL FLEES

AMID A HAIL OF SHOT, BOY MONARCH ESCAPES TO A BRAZILIAN WARSHIP.

Many Reported Dead.

The information that the short and bitter revolution in Portugal had resulted in victory for the insurrectionists and that the Portuguese army and navy had departed from the royal standard and joined the uprising was brought to this city to-day by automobile from the frontier. Many are reported dead, not alone in Lisbon, but in others cities where outbreaks of violence occurred simultaneously with that in the capital city. Fighting between detachments of loyal troops and the revolutionists is still going on. It is impossible to estimate the number of dead. Judging from the vague reports, the toll may exceed 1,000.

A wireless report received from Santander stated that warships of the Portuguese Navy had hauled down their own colors and raised the flag of the republic, then begun a bombarding of the entire city. According to this report, the green and blue flag floats above the arsenal, the barracks and many public buildings in Lisbon, as well as over the palace.

City Taken by Surprise.

One meagre report, which is supposed to have been received by wireless at the Spanish coast frontier and telegraphed here, said that the royal bodyguard had remained loyal to the imperial family, and that a severe engagement had taken place while the troops were defending the King and the Queen mother from capture.

The revolt was so carefully planned and its attacks were so sudden and bitter that the city of Lisbon was taken completely by surprise. There had been no attempt to align troops in strategic positions to repel such an uprising, although there had been mutterings since early in the Summer when the break between the Vatican and the Portuguese government took place. Apparently the present insurrection was the direct result of the murder of Professor Bombarda, a Republican deputy and a bitter factionist in the anti-clerical cause. Professor Bombarda was shot by a lieutenant in the army. He died yesterday, and news of his death caused a wave of intense feeling and acrid enmity to sweep over Lisbon. Crowds of Republicans, armed and frenzied with excitement, thronged the streets in the vicinity of Bombarda's home.

Public Buildings Attacked.

The cry was taken up all over the city. The Republicans gave vent to their accumulated feelings of hate. Men hastily armed themselves and formed into bands which attacked churches and public buildings. Soldiers and gendarmerie were hooted and jeered. Barracks were erected of timber and stones in the Plaza.

Apparently the revolutionists had become emboldened enough for any enterprise. They threw off all disguise. The moment for the blow had come.

From the tumultuous marches through the streets and the breaking of windows the first blow was struck when soldiers were sent to disperse the mob. A pitched battle ensued.

According to the reports received in this city, many of which are vague and contradictory, many of the police and soldiery deserted the royal standard immediately after ascertaining the real strength and feeling of the revolutionists.

In the meantime the streets were filling with frenzied men and the roads leading into the city were choked with hurrying throngs eager to join the revolutionary movement. The mobs were armed and menacing.

Cheer Revolutionary Colors.

The blue and green banners of the republicans commenced to bob up above the heads in many quarters. Every time a revolutionary flag was raised aloft a cheer would go up and some fresh enterprise suggested.

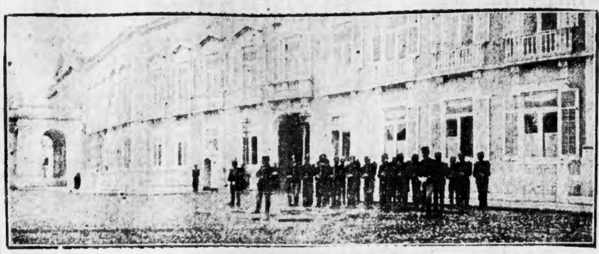
The army of the insurrectionists was apparently well led and the plans were well made.

Many of the men were equipped with modern firearms, and as the stories from Lisbon and Oporto and other cities were pieced into a connected narrative it was made more and more evident that the master hand of the Paris agency which had financed the Spanish revolution played a part in the Lisbon uprising.

Detachments of the Revolutionists surrounded the barracks, the royal palace and the customs house and naval quays almost simultaneously. Terms were dictated and it is reported that King Manuel was told that he must abdicate his throne or suffer the risk of remaining in a turbulent republic.

Warships turned their guns on the city and sailors who had been shouting "Long live the King," but a short time before, excitedly hauled down the Portuguese flag and trampled it under foot then cheered lustily while the flag of the insurrectionists was raised to the peak.

The ships which had betrayed the Braganza government then drew off from the city. The decks were cleared for action and the men prepared as if they were going into battle.



MANUEL'S FATHER ASSASSINATED IN FEBRUARY, 1908

King Manuel's father, Don Carlos, then ruler over Portugal, and his brother, Crown Prince Luiz, were assassinated on February 1, 1908, in the streets of Lisbon on their return from a sojourn at the King's estate at Villa Vicosa. The Queen and the Infant Manuel were in the carriage with them when they were shot.

Manuel though struck on the right arm by a bullet from a carbine, showed his pluck by whipping out a revolver and discharging it at the assassins. The Queen, with a gallantry that has since clung brightly to her name, threw herself toward her two sons at the first shower of bullets, shielding their bodies with her own, and struck out frantically at the murderers with a bouquet of roses she was carrying. She escaped injury.

Because of the beautiful weather that day, an open carriage was in waiting at the railroad station in Lisbon for the royal party. When they took their places there was the most respectful silence, and no hint of the tragedy so soon to be enacted.

As the carriage bearing the King and his family turned into the Rua do Arsenal there was a cracking of guns and a shower of bullets tore their way into the bodies of the King and the Crown Prince. There were six of the assassins. They ran with astonishing boldness right up to the sides of the vehicle and poured in a hail of lead before the stupefied escort could intervene.

The King and Crown Prince, half rising, fell back bleeding into the cushions of the carriage. Almost before the police knew what was going on, the assassins had emptied their guns and turned to flee into the crowds. Then the King's mounted guard charged upon them, pursuing them down the street and riddling three of them with bullets. The others were made prisoners.

The only one of the regicides of any standing was Manuel Buica, a sergeant in the cavalry and a teacher in an elementary school. He was killed. The other two who were shot down were store clerks.

Manuel was proclaimed King of Portugal by Premier Franco, two days after the assassinations.

PRETENDER QUITS ITALY; MAY BE ON WAY TO PORTUGAL

PARIS, Oct. 5.—It is reported here that Dom Miguel of Braganza, pretender to the Portuguese throne, has left Italy, where he has been in exile, and is on his way to Lisbon.

A very strict watch has been kept at Viareggo, Italy, on the pretender for months to prevent his departure, but it is supposed he has eluded the observers.

The royal palace at Lisbon, from which King was driven, and Queen Amelie.

ALFONSO'S THRONE IS ALSO MENACED

MADRID, Oct. 4.—The whole Iberian peninsula, comprised of Spain and Portugal, is seething with revolutionary spirit to-day. The latest reports from Lisbon are to the effect that the rebels hold practically all the capital and that the monarchy is doomed.

Spain, already torn by internal warfare and rioting, is making desperate preparations for a final stand against the onrush of republicanism. Troops are being hurried to every strategic point. Garrisons are being strengthened and double guards of cavalry and artillery are patrolling the frontier. Advices of rebel successes in Portugal are suppressed as far as possible.

Headquarters in Paris.

In political circles it is known that the same agency with a Paris headquarters which financed the recent Spanish uprising, which is still simmering, also stood financially behind the revolution in Portugal. The bitter strife in Spain, dating back two years, culminated in the recent religious rioting, which in turn had led to the direct promise of civil war unless King Alfonso promises to abdicate and throw the government of Spain into the hands of the Republicans.

King Alfonso and his Cabinet are making their preparations for a final stand to-day. Their plans are being kept as secret as possible, but the heavy movement of troops throughout all last night and to-day are sufficient evidence that they expect at any minute to face the same ordeal that overwhelmed Manuel across the border.

Hourly Bulletins on Border.

The fortunes of internecine war have linked the monarchies of Spain and Portugal in a common cause. While the developments of to-day as portrayed in highly censored reports indicated that Portugal is practically a republic now, King Alfonso, heartened by his stern advisers and buoyed up by the centuries of sentiment in the divine right of kings, is determined that Spain will be shattered in war before he will abdicate or see his government transformed.

The loyalty of a great section of the Spanish army is in doubt. The War Minister was instructed to scatter the loyal troops amongst those whose allegiance to the crown is doubtful.

It was reported that in some quarters outbreaks occurred on receipt of the news from Portugal. In Madrid extra police precautions were taken. The civil gendarmes were reinforced with soldiers and machine gun batteries were made ready for instant use.

Menacing crowds in the streets were dispersed and many arrests were made. From the north and south came rumors which gave the general situation a gloomier hue and added to the dangerous attitude of the radicals in this city.

CLIMAX OF SERIES OF PLOTS AGAINST LIFE OF YOUNG KING

PARIS, Oct. 5.—The present revolutionary uprising in Portugal is but a culmination of a long series of plots against the throne and the King.

There have been countless conspiracies against the life of the young King. One of the most dangerous occurred in April, 1908, two months after the assassination of King Carlos.

So great was the danger then that thousands of troops bivouacked in the streets and machine guns guarded every approach to the royal palace.

More than fifty rioters were slain and 303 wounded in the terrific street fighting.

Hundreds of political arrests were made and the jails of the city were crowded.

The assassination plot, which the police claim was laid by Republicans, was then declared to have been aimed not only at the death of the King but all his cabinet ministers and the establishment of a republic.

OVERTHROW OF MONARCHY WAS LONG IMPENDING

Manuel II. was nineteen years old at his accession, the youngest reigning monarch in Europe. He was educated in the palace under distinguished instructors, and at the age of fourteen entered the navy as a midshipman, having risen to a lieutenancy by the time of his accession. He went to England in the Autumn of 1909, and the British press, although without any official announcement, insisted that the purpose of his visit was connected with a betrothal to Princess Alexandra, daughter of the Duke of Fife.

If that was his errand it was unsuccessful. November of the same year found him in Paris. While he was there a French general was killed by an Algerian, said to have been insane, and it was suggested that his deed was a misdirected attempt to kill King Manuel or President Fallieres, who were near by when the attack was made. After the death of his father, King Manuel issued a proclamation announcing that he would uphold the constitution and preserve the integrity of the condition.

Rumors of the overthrow of the monarchy in Portugal have been current for a long time. In fact, the voice of dissension has not been silent since King Manuel ascended the throne after the assassination.

In addition to serious dissensions over political matters, Portugal has been on the verge of a rupture with the Vatican, a fact that has led to serious conflicts between the Clericals and anti-Clericals. The Vatican has taken occasion to deny the seriousness of the trouble between it and the Portuguese Government, and also asserted that no Clerical plot existed for the overthrow of the monarch.

It was added by a Vatican official that the presence in Portugal of Alejandro Lerroux, chief of the Republicans in Barcelona, Spain, had led the Vatican authorities to believe that the circulation of such reports had been instituted by Lerroux in order to give the Republicans a pretext for attacks on Catholics.

WILL GET NEWS BY AUTOMOBILES

PARIS, Oct. 5.—The National News Association entered into arrangements to-day with the Paris Matin, the great French newspaper, to establish a system of automobile couriers between Lisbon and Madrid, in order to secure the first authentic news of the Portuguese rebellion.

The Portuguese revolutionists hold full possession of all telegraphs in Portugal and the meagre dispatches which have been allowed to pass the frontier have been strictly censored. To circumvent the restrictions thrown about the securing of authentic information by the Portuguese rebels, the National News Association and the Matin made arrangements to-day for the most unique news gathering enterprise in the history of journalism.

Racing Autos for News.

A dozen automobiles will be used. Each will carry, in addition to the chauffeur, two persons to handle the dispatches, gather additional data and write the graphic descriptions. According to the plans the information will be carried either from Lisbon or the nearest point in Portugal to Madrid or the nearest available telegraph station across the border in Spain. Arrangements were undertaken, however, to extend the route clear through from Lisbon to Madrid if conditions would permit. The distance between the two capitals is 300 miles, as the crow flies. The route as laid out for the automobile express after allowing for detours is above 400 miles. The automobiles will be used in relays so that not a moment in speed will be lost.

Owing to conditions at the Spanish-Portuguese frontier it will probably be necessary to use unfrequented routes in order to avoid the delays attending inspection.

"Declaration of Justice."

"A declaration of justice," defending the acts of the rebels in Portugal, was issued in this city to-day by Senhor Magelhoes Lima, one of the most prominent of the Republicans in Portugal and the owner of the newspaper Vanguardia, the official organ of the insurrectionists. His statement follows:

"Fatal emergencies occurred after the death of King Carlos. It was hoped that the monarchical party would comprehend the lesson taught in those events, but it refused to read the signs. Instead of taking cognizance of the people's will as expressed by those events, the monarchical party followed with an accumulation of faults and abuses, which provoked the present action against imperial dictatorship.

LISBON IS CUT OFF FROM WORLD

LONDON, Oct. 5.—Hundreds of anxious inquirers thronged the Portuguese legation here to-day seeking information of affairs in Portugal. At the British foreign office message after message was sent to Lisbon, but no reply followed. It was believed at the foreign office that the Portuguese rebels were in control of all telegraph wires. All communication with Lisbon has been cut off for twenty-four hours.

Minister Soveral, representing the Portuguese Government here, could furnish no facts further than those published in the newspapers. Plainly he feared the worst, but would make no comment. He said he was making every effort to get in communication with the Portuguese capital and hoped to be successful some time to-day.

"I have received no official intelligence of any kind, and my only information was contained in dispatches sent to the newspapers," said he.

Sir Arthur Nicholson, under secretary of the Portuguese legation, conferred with Minister Soveral this morning, which gave rise to the report that information had been received confirming the downfall of the monarchy, but was being kept secret. This was later denied by Sir Arthur. A dispatch was received here from Santander, Spain, where it had been picked up by a German steamer after being sent by wireless from a steamship of the line lying off Lisbon, to the effect that the rebels were in complete control of the capital of Portugal.

This message confirmed the earlier report that the city had been bombarded by warships and the royal flag hauled down from the palace. A Portuguese merchant here declared to-day that he had received private advices on Monday that a plot was brewing and that it would break in a few hours.

The British government is reported to have received assurances that there would be no break in the diplomatic relations between Portugal and England in the event that a republic is established. Two Republican Senators, Lima and Reivas, came to London two months ago as envoys of the revolutionists. It was their duty to inform the British Government that Portugal under republican government would continue to recognize existing treaties.

BOMBARDA'S DEATH MAY HAVE STARTED THE REVOLUTION

LONDON, Oct. 5.—The announcement of the death of Professor Bombarda, the Republican deputy and anti-clerical, who was shot by the army Lieutenant Rebello at Lisbon Monday, may possibly have started the revolution. Bombarda was a distinguished educator. He was recently elected to the Portuguese Parliament in the Republican interest. His assailant, according to some reports, was a madman.

A recognized authority in Portuguese affairs, in an interview here, affected no surprise at the news of a rising. He said that the Republican party was thoroughly organized and that everything had been prepared for a bloodless revolution.

Captain Peter King, brown of face, firm of jaw and with a flash of determination in his eyes, is in Boston to-day from West Arichat, Cape Breton, taking up the fight in behalf of Hattie Le Blanc, the seventeen-year-old girl facing trial for the murder of Clarence F. Glover.

The grizzled skipper has visited the girl in the East Cambridge jail, assured her of his assistance, told her that either her father or mother—probably her father—would be at her side during the ordeal of her trial and let her know that many of her old friends in her far-away homeland stand ready to come to Boston to help her if it is deemed necessary.

Two motives impelled the Captain to come here. In the legal controversies over the property of Glover since his murder last November many accusations were made, among them one to the effect that Captain King could tell stories that would not help Hattie Le Blanc.

Captain King indignantly denounces that imputation, and he is here not only for the sake of the little imprisoned girl, but to show his friends and relatives in Boston that the story is untrue.

Ready to Testify.

Captain King will take the witness stand at the trial of Hattie, if he is allowed, and he assured a reporter of the AMERICAN that he would tell a story that would throw a startling light upon the situation that was only partly revealed by the Waltham tragedy and the subsequent public investigations.

"I have come here," said Captain King to-day, "for two purposes. One is to help Hattie Le Blanc and the other is to re-establish my good character. I propose to do both. I have at least fifty relatives in and about Boston, I have sailed into this port scores of times, am known to business men here, and I do not propose to stand by silently and listen to any aspersions on my character."

While the Captain talked there stood, smiling assent by his side, his niece, Mrs. Abram Le Blanc, who resides near Boston. The Captain is seventy, but he does not look it, being of the hardy folk of the sea who live to be a hundred and nothing is thought of it. There is but a sprinkle of gray in his hair. He talks simply, but to the point, and there is a finality about the finish of his sentences that indicates the character of the man who has had to meet emergencies in his battle with Old Neptune that did not permit of dilly-dallying.

Came Voluntarily.

"I came here of my own volition," continued the captain. "I have not been subpoenaed by either side, but I hope that I may be. State Detective Byrnes came up to West Arichat looking up the case. He talked to me and I got the idea that the trial was coming up right away and so I took the boat and train to Boston. It was what I heard from the detective and because of his visit to my home town that I decided to come right away.

"Now about Hattie Le Blanc—I knew her well as a child. For that was all she was when she lived at home. The idea of connecting my name—me a man of seventy and she a girl of perhaps thirteen or fourteen when she was there, is ridiculous. It gives an idea of the carelessness with which statements have been made about this case.

"Hattie was employed at times by a relative of mine. She worked off and on there for perhaps eighteen months and was paid for it—small wages, of course, in comparison with what girls receive here, but she was happy and safe there. We are simple folk up in Cape Breton, but honest. If there are any scandals there they are brought in from the outside. Men of the sea do not permit wrongs done to their wives, their daughters or their sisters—the sea is too near and too deep for that.

"Smartest Girl in Country."

"I recall Hattie more particularly because she was the smartest girl up in our country, just as I have heard she is the smartest girl that the sheriff ever had in the East Cambridge Jail. But while she was employed practically in my family, I was not home much of the time.

"Then Hattie left for the States. Mrs. Lillian Glover came up there about two years ago. She brought a breath of the city with her—a flash of fashion—a flare from the world of light and life.

"Mrs. Glover was naturally captivated with Hattie. There were possibilities of development in the girl. Hattie has the French in her that longs for the beautiful in dress. For Hattie to see Mrs. Glover arrayed as only she had seen women in magazines was for the girl to fall rapturously in love with her.

"Hattie could not speak English, but she has an amazing facility in speaking French. She and Mrs. Glover became fast friends.

"'Come back with me,' Mrs. Glover told the girl. 'Come back home with me and you'll have clothes and hats and shoes like mine. You can live with me and I'll pay you, perhaps adopt you.'

"That is the story Mrs. Glover told Hattie. There's nothing wrong about it, either, and so far as I know in most respects Mrs. Glover kept her word to the girl. I'm simply telling you this to show the lure that brought this little girl from her simple home to where she is now.

"Girl Glad to See Me."

"Hattie heard that girls received as much as $5 a week here, too, but I don't know that she was promised that much. So Hattie came to the States. She made the trip with Mrs. Charles Poirier, who is living near Boston.

"And that was the recollection I had of Hattie until I saw her in the East Cambridge jail. What a development! Mrs. Glover was right when she looked at this little girl in Cape Breton and then into the future—she saw Hattie Le Blanc as she is physically to-day—and a sweeter, prettier girl it would be hard to find.

"In the two years that Hattie has been here she has stepped over the boundary that divides childhood from womanhood and she has carried with her that innocent charm that belonged so naturally to her former life. Oh, but Hattie was glad to see me. She was a-flutter with excitement and she deluged me with questions in French: How's mother? How's father? How's the children? When did you see them? Did they send any word to me?

"After she had fired a machine gun of questions like this she allowed me time to answer some of them. I told her that the family were all well and that they had made me promise to go and see her at the first opportunity. They told me to tell her that they loved her just like they did when she was a little girl and that they knew she had done nothing wrong.

Weeps at News from Home.

"Tears sprang into the blue eyes of the girl and she exclaimed softly to herself while I was telling her about her people. Then I told her that either her father or mother would come to her when her trial started. She said that her mother could hardly come, and that is true, because there are six small children to look after. But her father is sure to come if her mother does not.

"Of course that pleased her most. Now she has something to look forward to, because she has been a lonesome little girl, locked up there so far away from home, but they told me at the jail that her cheerfulness never deserted her.

"After we had talked about her people I asked her this: 'Hattie, what does all this mean about coupling my name and yours while you were at home? What does it mean? Who started such a story?'

"Then the poor girl, herself facing a trial for her life, at once showed her solicitude for me and exclaimed:

"'Don't you worry, Captain. I'll stand by you and show them that you are one of the best men on earth and would not injure any one, let alone a little girl. I'll see that you are righted.'

"I told her that that was not what I had come to see her about, as I could look after that little matter myself and that I intended to do so. I told her I was going to help her all I could and she was grateful. She was not worried at all. She looked like a fresh flower shut up that still persisted in growing more beautiful every day."

UNITED ISSUES BIG SHOE STOCK

An indication of the amount of money involved in the purchase of the Wonder Worker patents by the United Shoe Machinery Company which closed the litigation between Thomas G. Plant and the United Company, is contained in the announcement that the United has issued $3,480,000 worth of new stock.

The announcement is made in its report to the Boston stock exchange. In it it says that it issued 60,000 new shares. The present market valuation is $58 per share. It is believed that this amount was paid for the Plant patents. It is not believed, however, that the purchase included the Plant factories. Based on their earning capacity of $500,000 a year they are estimated to be worth, therefore, at least $2,000,000. As a matter of fact the Plant factories were purchased by interests prominent in the management of the United Company.

The need of establishing a commercial rating for Boston that business enterprises seeking a location may see at a glance the advantages offered in Boston was urged to-day by George S. Smith, chairman of the Committee on Manufactures of the Boston Chamber of Commerce at its assembly in the American House.

Chairman Smith's subject was "Greater Boston." He explained the need that a large city had of a commercial rating to attract new enterprises. Then he showed that government figures based on Boston's population by itself did not show the enormous volume of purchasing power that Boston commanded.

Chairman Smith said in part as follows:

Statistics Needed.

"The stitistics of cities published in government reports have the force of commercial ratings. They have much the same significance for the merchant and manufacturer seeking a location for his business as the ratings given in Dun or Bradstreet have for the man investigating the standing of a private corporation. If this rating is low in respect to size and per cent. of increase in population, trade and industry, the city suffers by comparison with rival communities.

If the rating is high, the impression as to the commercial and industrial opportunities which the city offers is favorable and will frequently influence the merchant or manufacturer to locate his store or factory in the new and promising field. There is no denying the fact that cities, like private firms and corporations, have a business rating in the estimate of the country at large, and that this rating constitutes a real advantage or hinderance according as it is favorable or otherwise. For sound business reasons, then a city should make every legitimate effort to secure the highest commercial standing which the facts warrant.

"We, in Boston have failed to do this. The latest census figures give the city proper a population of 670,000 and an annual value of manufactured products less than $200,000,000. As compared with similar figures for New York, Chicago and Philadelphia, this showing seems a poor one. As compared with the actual population and production of the real or Greater Boston, the figures are inadequate and misleading.

No Fear for Comparison.

"How is the merchant in another State thinking of opening a new establishment, going to learn from the census figures that the local market of Boston commands a volume of purchasing power, normally wielded by a million and a half people? How is the manufacturer seeking a new site for his plant to know that within Greater Boston will be found nearly a third of a million workers, possessing every variety of skill and experience, who produce annually nearly $800,000,000 worth of manufactured products, or about three times that reported for Boston proper.

"Such men have neither the time nor inclination to sit down and dig out the real truth as to the manufacturing and commercial importance of Boston. It is high time that we asserted ourselves and claimed the recognition as to size and economic achievement that is rightfully ours.

"To accomplish this no extravagant statements need be made. The plain unvarnished truth as to the real extent and importance of the business community of Greater Boston will be sufficient to correct the wrong and harmful estimate that at present prevails. Once the true proportions of Boston are clearly seen and taken as the groundwork for all discussion of business opportunities hereabouts, there will no longer be any occasion to fear comparison with other cities.

Striking Facts.

"The sober facts as to the condition of industries in Greater Boston are striking and significant. Within the Boston Industrial District the per cent. of increase in the value of manufactured goods during the period 1900-1905 was 29.2 per cent. This was about a third greater than the rate for the Chicago district, nearly twice that of the Philadelphia district and only 3½ per cent. less than the increase for the New oYrk district. These figures show the splendid vitality and expanding power of Boston's industries which would be wholly lost on the man reading int he regular census returns that the value of Boston's manufactured product for the period 1900-1905 increased only 13.26 per cent.

"This last figure is correct for municipal Boston. But it gives no hint of the remarkable growth that has long since been forced to find space and scope in the suburbs. In this five-year period, 1900-1905, while Boston proper increased her industrial proportion less than 14 per cent., the district outside of Boston, making up the industrial district, showed an advance of 42.7 per cent. Now the important fact to note here is that this district, where production has almost doubled within five years, is just as much a part of Boston in an industrial and commercial sense as Roxbury, Charlestown or any other section of the city proper.

"The reason why the country generally doesn't know of this astounding progress is because Boston is not a federated or expanded city like Chicago or New York. Such being the case it is of the utmost importance that some steps be taken to gain appropriate recognition of the essential unity of the Greater Boston District."

IDENTIFY 2 DRUG BURGLAR SUSPECTS

Two young men captured last night by the Dorchester police near the drug store of Charles H. Davis, just after the officers had discovered that the side door of the store had been forced, were to-day identified as James M. Smith, twenty-two years old, of No. 107 Draper street, Dorchester, and Hugh Perry, twenty-one years old, of No. 96 Chestnut street, Brookline. The two are suspected of having held up Charles L. Blake, the Bird street druggist. This hold-up, which netted its perpetrators $16, occurred just two hours before Perry and Smith were arrested. The two men who held up Blake in his Bird street store answer in every way the description of two who held up Patrick J. Flaherty in the Beacon Pharmacy in Somerville the night before.

AMES RENOMINATED; SAYS 'NEW SPEAKER'

"When Congress convenes again, we are going to elect a new Speaker of the House, a Speaker to-day and not of yesterday, and that Speaker will not be Cannon;" declared Congressman Butler Ames at the 5th Congressional District Convention at Lowell to-day, following his unanimous renomination by the Republicans of that district. The declaration was received with marked applause by the sixty-one delegates. At the Republican County convention, held in the same city to-day, C. H. Richardson of Lowell, and Chester B. Williams of Wayland, were unanimously nominated for county commissioners, while District Attorney John J. Higgins was given a unanimous re-nomination for the offices he now holds.

SHARON TOWN NOTES STRANGELY MISSING

SHARON, Oct. 5.—From a strong box in the town safe, which is presumably proof against cracksmen, two promissory notes made out by the town, signed and negotiable, and written for a total of $2,122.50 have strangely disappeared. The missing notes are payable to the trustees of the Sharon Public Library. One is for $500 and dated December 31, 1903, the other for $1,622.45 and dated July 1, 1904. Both bear the signatures of the selectmen and the town treasurer.

LORIMER'S DEPUTY MUST ANSWER ALL

CHICAGO, Oct. 5.—The senatorial committee investigating the election of William Lorimer to the United States Senate to-day ruled that John Broderick, who is accused of being Lorimer's go-between with the men who were bribed, must answer all questions put to him. This will not permit Broderick to decline to answer for fear of incriminating himself, and he will face prison unless he answers. The ruling is expected to apply to Lee O'Neil Browne also.

RESTRAIN HUSBAND IN FAMILY WRANGLE

In the Suffolk Superior Court to-day Judge Richardson issued an injuction restraining Thomas E. Spear from disposing of personal property which his wife, Jessie F. Spear, claims belongs to her. Mrs. Spear who petitioned for the court's order stated that the goods are at No. 25 Winthrop street, Roxbury, in an apartment nnow occupied by her husband alone.

HALE STATUE FUND IS NOW $6,926.50

The Edward Everett Hale Statue Fund now amounts to $6,926.50. Acknowledgment of this amount was made to-day by the treasurers of the fund, Kidder, Peabody & Co. One of the largest contributers in the past few days was Mrs. Robert D. Evans who gave $1,000.

$1,000 FOR Y. W. C. A.

Boston Young Women's Christian Association is given a $1,000 bequest in the will of Sarah M. Stetson of Brookline, allowed by Judge Flint at the Norfolk County Probate Court at Dedham to-day. The remainder of the Stetson estate, valued at $15,000 in all, is to be divided between twelve nieces, grandnieces, nephews and grandnephews.

WOMAN'S PLACE IS HOME, SAYS VANNUTELLI

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—"The Catholic Church, though very favorable to the working people, cannot approve of the principles of Socialism," said Cardinal Vannutelli in an interview here. "If Socialist leaders were conversant with the principles of the Gospel, the association would have no reason for existence. It seems to me that Socialism seems a very little thing in America, and that is on account of the good position taken by the church here. And the Catholic church is the best barrier against the exaggerations of Socialism. For the social order no church can give better guarantee than does the Catholic church."

The Cardinal became even more serious when asked if the church's attitude toward divorce would ever change. He gave an emphatic and final answer as follows:

"The church will never alter the regulations made concerning divorce, and I think that America's good sense is with the church. The best remedy would be a spiritual consideration of the marriage state before entering it. When there are difficulties Christian virtues should lead innocent parties to seek consolation in the church.

"What is your opinion of women in public life?" was asked. "Should they hold office?"

"I believe, with Pope Pius," he answered, "that the domestic life should be the dream of every woman—the family, the home, the children. The wife at home can do better work than on the public platform."

Then he spoke in a most complimentary manner of America.

"What impresses me most with America is the beauty of the country," he said. "I did not expect to see such grand scenery. Its beauty is far beyond my mental pictures of it, and I see a great future for the American people—better prospects than we can realize to-day.

"In my relations with the people I find the Americans are very good and polite. Their courtesy charms me, but, most of all, I have noticed the great activity of the people. Everywhere there is a bustling life."

Throughout the interview the Cardinal emphasized his words with gestures, exhibiting with hands and shoulders the earnestness which lay back of his conversation.

MRS. RICKER'S CAMPAIGN BIG AID FOR 'VOTES'

INTERVALE, N. H., Oct. 5.—Miss Marion Weston Cottle, a lawyer and suffragist, declares that the candidacy of Marilla M. Ricker for Governor of this State will serve to focus attention on the equal suffrage movement in New Hampshire, a most fruitful field for the work.

Miss Cottle says that there is a strong sentiment in favor of allowing women to vote in New Hampshire, many of the leading politicians being in favor of it. In the course of an interview Miss Cottle said:

"I am glad that Mrs. Ricker has announced her candidacy for the highest office in the State. It cannot but result in great good to the cause of equal rights for women. But I am of opinion that the Attorney-General was correct when he decided that she could not have her name placed upon the ticket for the primary election.

"Whatever the direct outcome of the present attempt of Mrs. Ricker to have her name upon the ticket, it will prove to be one of the greatest educational factors in the equal rights movement. It will call the attention of the people to the injustice existing to-day in the political status of women, and in that way much good will be accomplished.

"People who have never thought of equal suffrage are thinking of it now, on account of the publicity of her candidacy. And when the people begin to think sooner or later the problem is solved, and solved right."

POLITICS HOT ON DAY BEFORE THE STATE CONVENTIONS

WALKER'S STAND ON TARIFF FORESHADOWS FIGHT IN CONVENTION

Speaker Joseph Walker's ultimatum to the Republican State bosses that he will not stand for a whitewash of the Payne-Aldrich tariff schedules by the Republican State convention has given the leaders at the Kimball building headquarters a bad scare. Every effort was made to-day to prevent to-morrow's Republican State convention in Tremont Temple from looking like a gathering of Democrats. It was admitted to-day that the chances of averting a convention fight were small.

Walker, as a member of the Committee on Resolutions which will draft the platform for the Republicans, insists on a plank favoring a permanent independent tariff commission, defining the powers of the present board so as to make it permanent. He insists, chiefly, that the commission be given authority to report to Congress from time to time, so that Congress may revise intelligently, and schedule by schedule, the unjust features of the tariff. Revision in this way would prevent the log-rolling that would accompany a general revision, he says.

Republican candidates for Congress are still receiving orders from the machine leaders to pledge themselves to vote against Cannon for speaker in case their constituents ask them to declare themselves. Congressman George P. Lawrence of North Adams is the latest to make such a pledge. He was renominated by the First District Republicans without opposition.

Senator Lodge is directing his principal efforts towards aiding Republican candidates for the Legislature who are pledged to support him for re-election. The Senator is said to be more than mildly alarmed over the possibility of the election of enough Democrats to defeat him through a combination with the Butler Ames Republicans.

JUDGE HARRIS IS NOMINATED IN FOURTEENTH

BROCKTON, Oct. 5.—Judge Robert O. Harris of East Bridgewater was the unanimous choice of the delegates who attended the Republican convention of the Fourteenth Congressional District in Grand Army Hall to-day. There were 155 delegates, the requisite number entitled to seats in the convention, present.

Judge Frederick S. Hall of Taunton was chairman, and Loring W. Tucker secretary. Robert J. Keith of Bridgewater was nominated for Senator in the Second Plymouth County District. William H. Fanno received the nomination for County Commissioner.

'BEAT MURPHY,' IS SLOGAN OF INDEPENDENTS

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—"Beat the Murphy ticket! Drive Murphy out of the State!" was the war cry of every delegate to the Independence League State Convention which assembled at Cooper Union this afternoon.

From every county there came trooping into town hundreds of representatives of the independent sentiment of the rural communities, chosen at the recent primaries. As they greeted their metropolitan brethren they one and all pleaded that a ticket be nominated that would make it certain that Murphy does not succeed in getting such a clutch on the farm districts as he once had on this city.

There was not a delegate who did not express himself as eager to join in administering to Murphy in the State, next month, an even more overwhelming defeat than he suffered in Greater New York a year ago when all but one of his candidates were slaughtered at the polls.

Plans of Fight.

There was an honest difference of opinion as to the surest and most effective way of accomplishing this. A large number of delegates urged that William Randolph Hearst agree to accept a place on a ticket, so that there might not be the slightest doubt of preventing the Tiger from invading the up-river counties. Others argued that the surest method of beating "Murphy and his puppets" was to indorse the entire Republican State ticket. Some others contended that a straight Independence League ticket ought to be placed in the field.

It is probable that the exact method of insuring Murphy's overthrow will not develop until to-night, when each delegate in convention will be called upon to announce the sentiment of his district.

Unlike Murphy's men at Rochester last week, the Independence Leaguers do not purpose to tolerate any dark room or lantern tricks, but they insist that all proceedings shall be in the open and the wishes of each individual delegate consulted.

EX-SENATOR DOWD NOW A BENEDICT

The marriage was announced to-day of former Senator Thomas H. Dowd of Roxbury to Miss Helen L. Dolan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Dolan of No. 30 Francis street, Roxbury. A nuptial mass at the Mission Church followed the ceremony. Rev. James Hayes, C. S. S. R., officiated. Breakfast followed at the home of the bride's parents. After a honeymoon trip Mr. and Mrs. Dowd will live at No. 30 High Rock Way, Allston. Mr. Dowd is a well-known Boston lawyer. He is prominent in Elk circles and a brilliant speaker. He was prominently mentioned recently for the Democratic nomination for Congress in the Eleventh District.

CENTENARY OF PRINCIPAL.

The 100th anniversary of the birth of Professor Alpheus Crosby, from 1857 to 1865 a principal of the State Normal School at Salem, will be observed by the alumni of the school. A reception will be held on the afternoon of October 13 at the school in Salem.

J. E. WHITE FOR SENATOR.

BUZZARDS BAY, Oct. 5.—The following were nominated at the Republican convention to-day: John E. White, senator; A. L. Pattee, representative; H. M. Percival, sheriff; L. K. Chase, county commissioner; Elisha H. Bearse, assistant commissioner.

ONE DOSE ENDS INDIGESTION, GAS, DYSPEPSIA OR A SICK STOMACH.

Why not get some now—this moment, and forever rid yourself of Stomach trouble and Indigestion? A dieted stomach gets the blues and grumbles. Give it a good eat, then take Pape's Diapepsin to start the digestive juices working. There will be no dyspepsia or belching of Gas or eructations of undigested food; no feeling like a lump of lead in the stomach or heartburn, sick headache and Dizziness, and your food will not ferment and poison your breath with nauseous odors.

Pape's Diapepsin costs only 50 cents for a large case at any drug store here, and will relieve the most obstinate case of Indigestion and Upset Stomach in five minutes.

There is nothing else better to take Gas from Stomach and cleanse the stomach and intestines, and, besides, one single dose will digest and prepare for assimilation into the blood all your food the same as a sound, healthy stomach would do it.

When Diapepsin works, your stomach rests—gets itself into order, cleans up—and then you feel like eating when you come to the table, and what you eat will do you good.

Absolute relief from all Stomach Misery is waiting for you as soon as you decide to take a little Diapepsin. Tell your druggist that you want Pape's Diapepsin, because you want to become thoroughly cured this time.

Remember, if your stomach feels out-of-order and uncomfortable now you can get relief in five minutes.

DEMOCRATS OF WARD 9 MAY BOLT SEAVEY

Ward 9, the Donovan-Kelliher stronghold, refuses to stand for Sheriff Seavey as the Democratic nominee for re-election and will put an independent candidate into the field against him. Seavey was renominated by the Suffolk County Democratic convention, after Representative Daniel L. Sullivan, a Donovan lieutenant, had attacked the "Democracy" of Seavey, and Senator Joseph P. Lomasney, brother of Martin, had declared that "Seavey's Democracy was good enough for Ward 8."

The Sullivan-Lomasney debate provided real excitement for those who attended the convention held in Lorimer Hall, Tremont Temple. The storm broke when Sullivan paid the following tribute to Seavey:

"Seavey has never done anything for the Democratic party. He is the head and leader of the Suffolk County ring, and is in league with fourteen other Republican sheriffs throughout the State. He, like they, is a Republican, and he deserves no favors at the hands of the Democrats. I warn you delegates that if Seavey is nominated as the Democratic candidate to succeed himself, Ward 9 will put an independent candidate into the field, who, like the late John B. Moran, will win out against the combined Democratic and Republican machines."

Lomasney followed with an: "I give the approval of Ward 8 to the Democracy of Sheriff Seavey."

"Ward Eight's Democracy," retorted Sullivan, "may be judged from the fact that it supported the Republican nominee for Mayor in 1905."

"And Ward Nine's Democracy," answered Lomasney, "may be judged from the fact that it supported Storrow last Winter."

HURLEY WANTS TO RULE SALEM AGAIN

SALEM, Oct. 5.—Former Mayor John F. Hurley has announced his candidacy for Mayor of Salem. "You can say that I am in the fight to the finish," he said. "The people seem to want a strong opponent for the present Mayor. If this is the case they will support me, for am I not the strongest?"

"John F.," as he is known the State over, has been a candidate for eleven years, and during that period has been elected four times. Mayor Howard is already in the field.

MAYNARD SAYS THE FOSS BOOM IS STILL ALIVE

What was regarded by many politicians as a split between Mayor John F. Fitzgerald and Martin M. Lomasney, the Democratic leader of Ward 8, came to the surface to-day when Joseph A. Maynard, chairman of the Democratic City Committee, declared that the Foss boom for the gubernatorial nomination was alive and that he would be nominated.

Maynard is backed by Lomasney, and anything he says along political lines is regarded as a reflection of the views of the Ward 8 statesman. This statement was prompted to-day by the rupture between Fitzgerald and Foss.

"The Foss campaign for Governor is a live one," declared Maynard with much warmth. "It has not been killed in Boston because a few men got together and said so.

"The Foss forces cannot be stampeded, either by defeated candidates for office or by disgruntled candidates seeking high office.

"I have traveled the State over and I know what I am talking about when I say that the Foss forces are intact.

"And you may take this from me—Foss will be nominated at the convention on Thursday."

Extra Foss rooms were ordered to-day at the Quincy House for to-night by the Foss people.

GERMAN WILL TEACH AMERICANS ENGLISH

CHICAGO, Oct. 5.—A German, fresh from Germany, Professor Lorenz Morsbach, of the University of Gottingen, will teach English to the students of the University of Chicago. Prof. Morsbach, who last year was traded to the midway institution for Prof. John M. Manley, is said to be one of the best English linguists in the world. The University of Chicago will have his services only during the present school year. Prof. Manley last year taught English at Gottingen but has now returned to the faculty of the local university.

RICH BAKING POWDER MAN WANTS DIVORCE

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 5.—Robert Benson Davis, the baking powder magnate, who controls millions, has filed suit here for divorce. This was discovered in the Superior Court, when his wife made a demand for $5,000 a month alimony. She also asked the award of $3,000 for costs and $10,000 for attorney's fees. The complaint of the husband reveals charges that his wife and her relatives tried to have him committed to an asylum for the insane. He charges she tried to dispose of him in that manner in order to get control of his vast fortune.

RUSSIAN SPY HAS BEEN ASSASSINATED

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 5.—The Novoe Vremya says that Evno Azeff, described both as head of the Russian fighting Socialists and as a political police spy, has been assassinated at Weisbaden.

Azeff was condemned to death about two years ago by the revolutionists because of his alleged treachery.

125 BRICKLAYERS RETURN TO WORK

The settlement of the Building Trades Unions strike in New York affected 125 bricklayers and stone masons of this city, who resumed work today for contractors who had not been friendly to the unions in New York.

When the strike was declared in New York local bricklayers to the number of 125 employed in the construction of buildings on Harrison avenue, Beach street, Batterymarch street and the Court House, left their positions, preferring not to work for contractors who were fighting union labor in New York.

$21,894 DEFICIT AT HARVARD AERO MEET

The report of Adam D. Claflin, manager of the Squantum aero meet, states to the Harvard Society which conducted it that there is a deficit of $21,894.38. Ticket sales and all other receipts were $28,267.17. Total operating disbursements amounted to $120,036.84, but the balance between them and receipts of $8,230.33 was wiped out, and the deficit caused by permanent improvements and fixtures which cost $30,124.71.

SACRAMENTO, Cal., Oct. 5.—By resolution introduced in both houses of the Legislature Governor Gillett is asked to call a Pacific coast congress for the purpose of agitating a permanent battleship fleet in the Pacific coast.

ARTHUR S. DOANE IS DEAD.

Arthur S. Doane, aged seventy-seven, is dead at his home, No. 44 Francis street, Brookline, after a short illness. He was a printer and engraver, with offices at No. 27 Kilby street, Boston. Mr. Doane was born and educated in Charlestown. At the age of seventeen, he made a trip around the world, and lived for some years in the Argentine Republic, where his brother-in-law, Samuel Wheeler, was United States consul. He married Sarah Rowan of Newport, who is living. The funeral will be held to-morrow.

NOMINATIONS IN ESSEX.

Councillor William F. Murray arrived back from Phillips, Me., last night in time to shake hands with all the delegates to the District Attorney convention who live in his district, and in time to preside over the county convention. "My six days vacation has given me a new lease of life," he said. "I am ready to fight hard for election if it is necessary."

* * *

Councilman Jim Curley, despite the fact that he made an attack on the administration at the closing hour of the Tenth District fight, seems to be still in favor at City Hall. Dr. Mansfield of Ward 17, one of the councilman's ardent supporters has just received an appointment from the bath trustees to the vacancy at the Columbia Road gymnasium made by the appointment of Dr. Mahoney to the health board.

* * *

This year there will not be a small army of political hangers-on attending the Democratic Convention as reporters. In the past it has been a favorite way to load the convention with others than regularly elected delegates. The word has been passed out to the State committee officials to check this practice and it will be respected.

* * *

Councilman Jim Curley will return to-morrow from North Conway, N. H., having decided to cut short his two weeks' stay. He is not exactly alarmed because J. Mitch Galvin, his rival, has begun to campaign but he does not propose to let the Republicans get a lap on him through early campaigning.

* * *

The value of experienced election officers was well illustrated in the recount by which Honest John Quinn goes to the Governor's council instead of Representative Edward D. Collins. In Precinct 5 of Ward 7 an error of thirty-five votes was discovered. It was made by an election officer sworn in from the floor on the day of the caucus in place of one of the regular caucus officers. This mistake if not rectified was enough to change the entire result.

* * *

Eddie Collins incidentally has figured in two very close elections, in the first one with a happier result for himself. Last year as a candidate for the House of Representatives he was defeated on the original returns by a few votes. On the recount he nosed out the silver haired Mike Reidy by one vote and he went to the House of Representatives as a result.

* * *

If all those who are looking for a chance to crucify Mayor Fitzgerald to-morrow at the Democratic Convention are permitted to speak, several hours of the Faneuil Hall deliberations will be devoted to fiery expressions of opinion. The mayor reiterated yesterday the prediction that he has made many times that the convention will be entirely harmonious and that every man who takes part will walk out of the convention hall satisfied that everybody got a square deal.

* * *

George Brown, who is the active press agent of W. Dudley Cotton says that he has the solemn pledge of over twenty Fitzgerald Democrats to vote for Dudley, even though he be the Republican candidate. He says there is nothing in the Eleventh District fight but Cotton to win. Perhaps so, but press agents have been known to have a bad reputation for veracity.

* * *

Congressman O'Connell, the "Red Devil" leader, and William J. Power, for many years the leader of the "Tincarts," have come together in one common opinion. Both agree that married bliss is preferable to single blessedness. Billy will take a life partner on next Tuesday and Congressman O'Connell will follow his example in November.

* * *

If Morris L. Morrison goes to the Legislature from Ward 21, it is said that he is pledged to support any amendment to the charter that will nullify the power of the Civil Service Commission over the Mayor of Boston's appointees. He is a Democratic candidate for the House and is one of the unlucky appointees of Mayor Fitzgerald's having been appointed a principal assessor at $4,000 per year, only to be thrown down for confirmation.

* * *

With all due respect to Herbert F. Kenny of Ward 17, who may have been embarrassed by the ignorant and unkindly remark that marred his seconding speech at the District Attorney Convention, he was a little too early in starting Assistant District Attorney Lavelle's boom. He said that he hoped next year to arise in the convention and second the nomination of Lavelle for District Attorney. It was a pretty compliment but there will be no District Attorney Convention in Suffolk county for three years after 1910.

* * *

Daniel L. Sullivan of Ward 9 was fighting for a hopeless cause in opposing the nomination of Fred Seavey but that does not detract from the able speech which he made in making plain the position of Ward 9 in the County Convention. Likewise Joe Lomasney demonstrated that he was a speaker of no mean ability when he arose to defend the sheriff against the attack of the Donovan supporters. The two speeches were enlivening features of an otherwise dull evening.

* * *

Ex-Councilman Joe Prendergast was defeated by a small margin for a House nomination in Ward 2. Although urged to run as an independent Joe says that he believes his services will be needed next year and is content to let the other fellows do the "representing" in the meantime. Spoken like a man, said a Giblinite.

* * *

"Con" Cotter and Johnny Sheedy ran neck and neck in the last primaries as Democratic House candidates in Ward 17. They outran "scattering." Both received a complimentary vote, but not enough to win. They promise to start building fences for next year. They figure that if "Jim Curley is successful in landing the Congress until election his time will be taken up in Congress and that they will be able to take the "boys" down town on the cars every morning looking for jobs.

* * *

Well, well! Who said there isn't going to be any harmony at the Democratic State Convention in Faneuil Hall to-morrow? Evidently that party didn't know that Stone's Military Band is going to be on the job with the far-famed Jim Kenney wielding the baton. Yes, indeed. And here is the program: March, "National Emblem," Bayley; Overture, "William Tell," Rossini; Concert Waltz, "Espana," Waldteufel; Popular Medley, "Remicks," Lampe; Entre'acte, "Wildflower," Snyder; Finale, "At The Fair," Burrill.

* * *

Nobody has yet applied for the moving picture rights in Faneuil Hall to-morrow.

* * *

Fred Macleod, the plain citizen, Fred Macleod, the candidate for Congress, and Fred Macleod, the Chairman of the Democratic State Committee, are having an awful time with each other. Incidentally, their diverse tendencies are not helping the Democratic party. Talk about Pooh-Bah!

* * *

The information (?) that is being handed out, sub rosa, about William A. Gaston not wanting Charles S. Hamlin to get the Democratic nomination for Governor is given a generous ha-ha by folks who know the real facts. Those who know call attention to the fact that Hamlin, after a bitter fight with Gaston for first place on the Democratic ticket some years ago, mounted the platform and seconded Gaston's nomination. Further than that, he left a sanitarium in the Berkshires a year later, when Gaston was again a candidate, and placed the latter in nomination. Judging from what is generally said of Mr. Gaston, he is not a man to forget such things.

* * *

And what is to be said of the report that Mayor Fitzgerald is "agin" Hamlin because the latter was "agin" him last Winter? Again referring to the folks who know the true facts, it will be learned that Mr. Hamlin stipulated when he pledged his support to the Storrow candidacy, that he would make no attack on Fitzgerald or do anything that would grieve the latter's family. Hamlin lived up to this declaration, too, despite vigorous endeavor to have him engage in vituperative attacks.

* * *

Just along the line of the foregoing, a word might be said concerning Fred Macleod's statement about Hamlin's lack of Bryan spirit. Perhaps Fred hasn't been out of the woods long enough to know that Hamlin toured the country for Bryan in 1900 and again in 1908, and that he gave Bryan more real assistance than any of the gentlemen who are now using Bryan's name in vain.

* * *

If the Chinese "free washee" ring and other enemies of upright statesmanship think that John L. Donovan of Ward 7 is going to lie down after being whipped for renomination, they're much mistaken. John is going to run at the polls on independent papers. Neighbor Crowley, who defeated him for the nomination, has got to explain, John says, just where he was in the recent Ninth District contest. Donovan declared openly for Keliher. "I want to know," he says, "whether Crowley was on the fence or with two or three candidates."

THE BEST TOILET SOAP IS CUTICURA

No Other Soap Does So Much for Poor Complexion, Red, Rough Hands and Falling Hair.

It Does Even More For Infants and Children.

In selecting a toilet, bath and nursery soap, why not procure one possessing delicate emollient properties sufficient to allay minor irritations, remove redness and roughness, prevent pore clogging, soften and soothe sensitive conditions, and promote skin and scalp health generally? Such a soap, combining with the purest of saponaceous ingredients the most fragrant and refreshing of flower odors, is Cuticura Soap. It costs but a little more, it wears to a wafer, and gives comfort and satisfaction every moment of its use in the toilet, bath and nursery.

No other soap has done so much for poor complexions, red, rough hands, and dry, thin and falling hair. It has done even more for skin-tortured and disfigured infants, children and adults, when assisted by Cuticura Ointment.

As a toilet soap for preserving and purifying the complexion, hands and hair, and as a skin soap for dissipating irritating and unsightly conditions of the skin, Cuticura Soap has no rivals worth mentioning. Its sale is greater than the world's product of other skin soaps combined. It is sold wherever civilization has penetrated, with depots in all world centers.

DEVLIN AS BOY ENTERED FIGHT FOR HOME RULE

By C. O'CONNELL GALVIN.

The four envoys from Ireland, who are to speak next Sunday night at Symphony Hall, are, in every sense, representative of their people and clothed with full authority to speak in their name.

Just before they departed from Ireland on their present mission a great public meeting was held at Limerick at which a powerful address on Home Rule was delivered by Mr. Redmond. Among the resolutions passed at this gathering was the following:

> That this meeting of the Nationalists of the historic city and County of Limerick, and of the entire Province of Munster, desires to impress on our race in America the importance of giving the Irish party, in whom the people of Ireland have the most confidence, that financial assistance which our exiled kinsmen abroad have ever given in the struggle for our native land, and we hold that never in the history of the Home Rule movement did the Irish party deserve better of our exiled kindred than they do now, as never was the prospect of Home Rule so bright as to-day, when through the tactics of the Irish party the question of National self-government for Ireland has attained the very foremost place in the politics of the British House of Commons.

Devlin Only 37.

Of the four representatives who have just begun their tour in behalf of the Irish cause, Mr. Redmond, T. P. O'Connor, Joseph Devlin and Daniel Boyle, Joseph Devlin is not the least interesting, both because of his remarkable career and his youth. Though only thirty-seven, he has already seen more than twenty years of arduous service in the cause of his country, being but a boy when he was chosen secretary of an Irish national society in Belfast, the city of his birth.

Mr. Devlin had but just left school when Gladstone's advocacy of Home Rule for Ireland fired his patriotic ardor. Soon he became a leader among the young nationalists of Belfast and when Thomas Sexton was chose by Parnell to contest West Belfast and try to win the seat from the Orange opponents of Home Rule Devlin worked night and day for the national ticket and Mr. Sexton was elected by twenty-nine majority.

Many, Many Tours.

Since then there has been no rest for Joseph Devlin in the fight for his country's right to nationhood.

In his native city he marshaled and organized the nationalist voters until they are now able to hold West Belfast against all opposition. They returned Devlin himself for the seat at the last elections by more than 500 majority.

Mr. Devlin has made world-wide tours in behalf of the Irish cause. He has spoken in every large city of Australia, in the Northern and Western States of this country and in Canada. The people of his race in the South are clamoring for his presence on this tour. And to meet their wishes, he will, in a few days after he speaks with Mr. Redmond in Cincinnati, enter unaided on a tour which will include a visit to all the principal centres from Pittsburg to Galveston and New Orleans. On his return North he will finish his tour by speaking at meetings in Charlestown, Savannah and Baltimore.

Besides being a leader in the Irish parliamentary forces and one of the most eloquent debaters of the party, Mr. Devlin is president of the Ancient Order of Hibernians in Ireland and general secretary of the United Irish League. Those who hear him in Symphony Hall next Sunday night will enjoy an oratorical treat that will not soon be forgotten.

EVELYN THAW, HARD UP, GIVES UP SUIT

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—James B. Regan of the Hotel Knickerbocker got an order from Supreme Court Justice Guy directing Evelyn Nesbit Thaw to show cause why a suit she brougat against Regan for $50,000 damages in 1908 should not be discontinued for lack of persecution. Mrs. Thaw sued because Regan had her ejected from the Knickerbocker grill room when she went there with E. R. Thomas. Dan O'Reilly, counsel of record for Mrs. Thaw, said that the motion would not be opposed because the plaintiff is unable to get any witnesses now and is without funds o carry on the case.

SAVE ALL BUT THREE OF 42 HORSES IN FIRE

MANCHESTER, N. H., Oct. 5.—A fire which threatened to sweep an entire square started in the large wooden stable on Hanover street, conducted by Edward Bohan. A general alarm brought every piece of fire apparatus to the scene. There were forty-three horses in the stable and all were rescued but three. The stable was ruined, many carriages being destroyed.

TURN DOWN MAYOR'S LAND TAX PLAN

The Finance Commission has refused Mayor Fitzgerald's request for an investigation of the subject of taxing property owners upon unearned increment of values, and informed him that the city's revenues were ample for all legitimate needs, provided the city's business was conducted honestly and economically. One reason that the commission gives for not wanting to make such a study is that it has altogether too much work on hand.

SUICIDE AFTER DRINK.

PROVIDENCE, Oct. 5.—After taking a drink of whiskey and firing four shots into the floor of a saloon causing a panic among the men lined up along the bar, James J. Sullivan committed suicide by shooting himself through the right temple. No one was injured by the stray bullets.

ARCHBISHOP GLENNON

ST. PATRICK'S CATHEDRAL

© BY ANDERSON ARCHBISHOP FARLEY

PLAN MEMORIAL TO ARCHBISHOP

Plans are under way by the Knights of Columbus for the erection of a monument in remembrance of the late Archbishop John J. Williams. A bronze bust of the prelate has been made by Hugh Cairns, the well known sculptor, who has produced what is said to be the most lifelike reproduction that it is possible to make.

The bust in bronze, is four feet six inches high, weighs about three tons, and it is to have a splendid setting on a granite obelisk with several steps and exedra, upon which will be an angel in a kneeling position, with outstretched wings.

LYMAN IS RECOVERING FROM HUNTING INJURY

HAMILTON, Oct. 5.—George H. Lyman, until this year collector of the port of Boston, is now at his home in Hamilton recovering from injuries received in a hunting trip in the province of New Brunswick. He is mending rapidly and may be permitted to return to his home in Boston in another week.

FALLS FROM WINDOW.

Mrs. Margaret O'Neil, a middle-aged widow, without friends or relatives in the city, fell from the second story window of her room in the lodging house at No. 15 Kneeland street. She was discovered unconscious in the street, with a broken ankle and a fractured collar bone, and was taken to the City Hospital.

TWO AVIATORS HURT IN CRASH

PARIS, Oct. 5.—Leon Morane, the best-known of the French aviators, had both legs broken to-day and his brother Robert had his skull fractured when a monoplane in which they were flying from Issy dropped at Boissy, St. Leger. Robert is thought to be fatally injured, while Leon's condition is critical. Leon Morane was to have left for America in a few days to represent France in the international aviation meet on Long Island.

FIREMAN HURT BY FALL THROUGH DOOR

Hoseman John Reynolds of Engine 15, corner of Dorchester avenue and West Broadway, was badly injured at a fire in the three-story building at Nos. 139-141 Dorchester avenue, South Boston, by the caving in of a trap door. He fell about twenty feet, receiving multiple injuries. He was taken to the Carney Hospital.

The fire loss was about $2,000.

CONSECRATE $4,000,000 CATHEDRAL

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—St. Patrick's Cathedral was consecrated to-day with all the grand ceremonial of the Catholic Church. The scenes in and around the noble edifice have never been equalled at any religious event held in this city. And with the exception of the Eucharistic Congress held recently in Montreal nothing approaching the ceremonies at St. Patrick's, for grandeur of vesture and impressiveness of ritual, has ever been seen on the American continent.

The services began at daybreak and lasted six hours. When the consecration rite was completed a solemn pontifical mass was sung at the high altar in the presence of an immense gathering of prelates of the church, members of the priesthood and the laity of New York.

The cathedral can accommodate 18,696 people. It is estimated that not less than 20,000 men and women were within the walls when the great service of the pontifical mass was begun.

Fifth Avenue Packed.

When the hour for the mass approached Fifth avenue was packed with people from curb to curb, the crowd extending several blocks above and below the cathedral.

Hundreds of police, mounted and on foot, were required to hold the great mass of people in order and to keep clear a passage for the procession of prelates and priests.

The procession was led by the crossbearer and acolytes. It presented a most impressive spectacle as with slow movement it came around from the archbishop's house on Madison avenue to the front doors of the cathedral and moved up the main aisle, while the great organ pealed forth Beethoven's march.

Included in the procession were three cardinals, His Eminence James Gibbons of Baltimore, His Eminence Vincent Vannutelli of Rome and His Eminence Michael Logue of Armagh, Ireland.

There were also present the following dignitaries of the church:

Church Dignitaries Present.

Bishop John J. Hennessy of Wichita, Bishop Thomas F. Hickey of Rochester, Bishop M. J. Hoban of Scranton, Bishop J. J. Keane of Cheyenne, Bishop W. J. Kenney of St. Augustine, Bishop Benjamin J. Keiley of Savannah, Auxiliary Bishop J. M. Koudelka of Cleveland, Bishop James A. McFaul of Trenton, Bishop Charles E. McDonnell of Brooklyn, Bishop P. J. Muldoon of Rockford, Bishop Theophile Meerschaert of Oklahoma, Bishop Henry P. Northrop of Charleston.

Bishop John J. O'Connor of Newark, Auxiliary Bishop Edward F. Prendergast of Philadelphia, Bishop Joseph J. Rice of Burlington, Bishop Augustine F. Schinner of Superior, Bishop C. Van De Ven of Alexandria, Bishop Augustine Van De Vyver of Richmond, Bishop Louis S. Walsh of Portland, the Right Rev. S. S. Ortinsky, Greek Catholic Bishop for the United States; Bishop MacSherry of South Africa, Archbishop E. J. McCarty of Halifax and Archbishop Fergus Patrick McEvay of Toronto.

Although St. Patrick's was opened in 1879 by Cardinal McCloskey and divine service has been held there uninterruptedly since, the structure could never be finally consecrated until it was entirely out of debt, the law of the church holding that only then can a building, whether parish church or cathedral, be regarded as safe from desecration, secure from common or profane uses.

Opened in 1879.

The plans for St. Patrick's Cathedral were drawn in 1858 by James Renwick, a leading New York architect, acting under the direction of Archbishop Hughes. The main building was opened by Cardinal McCloskey in 1879. Archbishop Corrigan added the beautiful spires in 1889, and it remained for Archbishop Farley to finish the interior and wipe out the last dollar of debt.

Up to the time of Archbishop Corrigan the cathedral had cost some $1,900,000. Since then $2,100,000 has been expended, making a total of $4,000,000. Were the cathedral to be built now, the expense would be double because of the increased cost of labor and materials.

As showing the size of St. Patrick's, it will be interesting to note the following comparisons.

What the Boston Elevated Has Done for Rapid Transit

Extensions and Additions, Subway, Elevated and Surface, Which It Has Provided

MAP. No. 3, DEC., 1904

The Boston Elevated Railway Company is showing the additions and extensions which it has made to its system. On Sept. 28 was shown the surface lines and the Tremont Street Subway as in January, 1898. This was when the Boston Elevated took charge. On Oct. 3 there was shown in addition the original elevated system.

To that is now added the EAST BOSTON TUNNEL. Shown thus ▥

This is believed to be the first structure ever built under the tide water for street cars.

It serves a district peculiarly located—a district in which eighty thousand people live.

Maverick Square is only ONE AND A HALF MILES from the old State House.

Yet before the tunnel was built it took 30 MINUTES to travel this mile and a half.

Now it takes but 5½ MINUTES.

The annoyance of changing to and from the ferry boats is eliminated.

IT CONNECTS DIRECTLY with the Atlantic Avenue elevated, with the Washington St. tunnel, and with the Tremont St. subway at Scollay square.

Every connection is a RAPID TRANSIT connection.

From no other section can the people reach a DOWN TOWN DESTINATION so quickly.

The MOST DIFFICULT of all transit conditions has been converted to the MOST CONVENIENT of all.

SIXTY CARS PER HOUR are now being operated in rush hours.

Plans under consideration will provide a capacity of ONE HUNDRED AND EIGHTY CARS PER HOUR.

East Boston possesses a magnificent water front. This is destined to exert a great influence on the maritime importance of Boston.

Without the tunnel, it is doubtful if such improvement could be accomplished.

This tunnel cost, with equipment, three and a half million dollars. It was opened for business December 30, 1904.

WIFE SAYS SHE WAS CIPHER, IN $30,000 SUIT

The champion [illegible] alche[illegible] of the world is what Mrs. George A. [illegible] to-day characterized her husband, who has brought a suit against [illegible] of her relatives for the [illegible] of [illegible].

"He's transformed [illegible] into $30,000," said Mrs. [illegible] "After [illegible] I was a cipher. I was [illegible] just like the wife of the man who was asked if he and his wife were 1, and he said, 'No, we are 10—I am 1 and she is 0.'

"Now my [illegible] and thinks I am worth $30,000 [illegible] mother, Mrs. Alice [illegible], for $30,000. I have [illegible] the luxury of spending [illegible] of his money since last March, [illegible]."

Theo. [illegible], a Russian postal employe, [illegible] jail on the charge of stealing 6,380 roubles from the Russian Government, while his wife and five small children are in destitute circumstances. His case is in the hands of the State Department, upon which his fate [illegible] the [illegible] have asked for his extradition.

YOU CAN INTEREST HIM

Any Man Over Fifty.

You can interest a man over fifty years of age in anything that will make him feel better, because while he may not as yet have any positive organic disease he no longer feels the buoyancy and vigor of twenty-five nor the freedom from aches and pains he enjoyed in earlier years, and he very naturally examines with interest any proposition looking to the improvement and preservation of his health.

He will notice among other things that the stomach of fifty is a very different one from the stomach he possessed at twenty-five. That greater care must be exercised as to what is eaten and how much of it, and even with the best of care there will be increasing digestive weakness with advancing years.

A proposition to perfect or improve the digestion and assimilation of food is one which interests not only every man of fifty but every man, woman and child of any age, because the whole secret of good health, good blood, strong nerves is to have a stomach which will promptly and thoroughly digest wholesome food, because blood, nerves, brain tissue and every other constituent of the body is entirely the product of digestion and no medicine or "health" food can possibly create pure blood or restore shaky nerves when a weak stomach is replenishing the daily wear and tear of the body from a mass of fermenting, half-digested food.

No, the stomach itself wants help, and in no round-about way either, it wants direct, unmistakable assistance, such as is given by one or two Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets after each meal.

These tablets cure stomach trouble because their use gives the stomach a chance to rest and recuperate. One of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets contains digestive elements sufficient to digest 3,000 grains of ordinary food, such as bread, meat, eggs, etc.

The plan of dieting is simply another name for starvation and the use of prepared foods and new-fangled breakfast foods simply makes matters worse as any dyspeptic who has tried them knows.

As Dr. Bennett says, the only reason I can imagine why Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are not universally used by everybody who is troubled in any way with poor digestion is because many people seem to think that because a medicine is advertised or is sold in drug stores or is protected by a trade mark must be a humbug, whereas as a matter of truth any druggist who is observant knows that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets have cured more people of indigestion, heartburn, heart trouble, nervous prostration and run-down condition generally than all the patent medicines and doctors' prescriptions for stomach trouble combined.

GIRLHOOD AND Scott's Emulsion

are linked together. The reason is that at a period when a girl's digestion is weak

It's the food that builds and keeps up a girl's strength.

TAFTS MUST FIND ANOTHER SUMMER HOME

BEVERLY, Oct. 5.—President Taft and his family really must [illegible] the Evans cottage at Burgess Point. [illegible] of Mrs. Evans's notice that the [illegible] lease, which expires at the close of this season, cannot be renewed, have [illegible]. She explains to the Taft family that she needs the land occupied by the cottage for an Italian garden.

Beverly [illegible] given to Mrs. Evans's [illegible] secret service men would [illegible] is responsible for [illegible] a renewal of the lease.

The big puzzle with the President just now is not the [illegible], but how to get Roosevelt off to Africa till 1912. The big puzzle for President Taft just now is [illegible] cottage as well suited for himself and his family as the one they now occupy. There is not another cottage in Beverly so well suited for seclusion from the public and [illegible] good view of the sea.

John Hays Hammond has assumed the rôle of ca[illegible] house [illegible]. It is said that he has asked the President to establish his Summer home at Gloucester, near the Hammond home. The President, however, considers the present location of the Summer capital executive offices an ideal one and he would prefer to be located nearer to them than Gloucester. Whether he makes his new Summer home in Beverly or in some other community on the North Shore, it is said that the executive offices will remain where they are now.

NORTHERN LIGHTS SHOW FOR ANCIENTS

MT. KINEO, Me., Oct. 5.—Following the brilliant reception given the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company, when 1,000 many-colored lights flashed over the waters of Moosehead, came the greatest display of [illegible], a showing of northern lights, so bright as to attract the attention of every one of 300 Bostonians, causing them to desert the hotel for the park. The company went to [illegible] and was [illegible] at a "Chowder [illegible]" being welcomed by Governor Fernald. To-day a number of water sports take place on the lake in front of the hotel.

M. C. M. A. SCHOOL OPENS ON MONDAY

The M. C. M. A. evening trade school will open Monday evening, October 10, in the Mechanics Building. Trades taught this year are plumbing, electricity, sheet metal work, pattern draughting, bricklaying and carpentry. Each student may [illegible] drawing if [illegible]. The classes [illegible] are held on Monday, Wednesday and [illegible]day evenings, are in charge of men who combine long trade experience with [illegible] years of school work. Preliminary registration will take place at 7:30 Friday evening.

PRISON CONGRESS HEARS BOSTONIAN

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—The question whether drunkenness was a crime or disease was debated at great length at the session of the International [illegible] Congress. Edwin Mulready of Boston declared that the short sentence in [illegible] the treatment of the drunkard as [illegible] was a failure. He said that in some [illegible] drunkenness is a disease and in some it is criminal.

ORDNANCE EXPLOSION KILLS ONE, INJURES 3

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—One man was killed and two others were badly injured in an explosion in the fuse and primer shop of the Washington Navy Yard. The dead man was an Italian named John Cademartori, first-class ordnance man. James Griffith of the same grade was probably fatally injured and Christian Schneider was seriously injured.

TAFT AND HAMMOND BATTLE ON LINKS

BEVERLY, Oct. 5.—President Taft motored over to the Myopia Country Club to-day and spent several hours on the links with John Hays Hammond as his opponent. At the executive offices [illegible] of the most quiet days on record [illegible] passed, nothing of any [illegible] developed.

INJUNCTION DISSOLVED.

The injunction issued in June against the Massachusetts Rifle Association was dissolved by Judge Richardson in the Suffolk Superior Court to-day. The association stipulated that certain targets at the Woburn range would be discontinued and all danger from stray bullets be obviated.

MAYOR GREETS GERMANS HERE IN CONVENTION

Saengermeister Johann F. Fitzgerald, Burgomaster of Boston, gave the delegates to the [illegible] convention of the German order of [illegible] in [illegible] Hall, No. 1065 Tremont street, a genuine [illegible] treat.

Ach! Yes; the selection was "Sweet Adeline."

The [illegible] this morning and will [illegible] Saturday. Delegates from all parts of the United States were formally welcomed to Boston at the convention reception attended by the Mayor and representatives of the City Council.

Mayor Fitzgerald was [illegible] the toastmaster, M. L. Trainor. The Mayor made a speech complimenting the German population of this city on their industry, benevolence and generally excellent citizenship. He was presented with a box of especially fine cigars by [illegible], a delegate from Sugar City, [illegible], at whose request the Mayor sang "Sweet Adeline."

ANOTHER GREAT CROWD ATTENDS BROCKTON FAIR

BROCKTON, [illegible]. The Brockton Fair is in full swing. The dense crowd which thronged its gates from exhibit to exhibit to-day made yesterday's crowd of 25,000 look like a [illegible] ten acre lot. [illegible] of people [illegible] four session [illegible] with the [illegible] far in excess of all [illegible].

The Brockton Fair [illegible] on the same proportions as the [illegible] stories, which [illegible] the crowd to-day with [illegible] early in the morning [illegible] to gather for the best [illegible] in all the days of [illegible] seasons of the agricultural [illegible].

And not only [illegible] and the fine [illegible] grounds, come to [illegible] rivals anything of its kind held in New England, but to-day was also [illegible] horse show. To give but a faint conception of the high standing of the [illegible] animals which pranced before [illegible] at 11 o'clock to-day, it may be said that the best from the stable of A. [illegible] G. Vanderbilt were shown.

To name all the [illegible] would [illegible] show program [illegible] Mrs. Hugo Bauer [illegible] Miss Dorothy Forbes, [illegible] of Newport, R. I., [illegible] New York [illegible] Morris [illegible].

LAWRENCE CLUB TO HAVE NEW GROUNDS

LAWRENCE, Oct. 5.—Piper and Sullivan of Boston, the new owners of the Lawrence baseball franchise, were here today [illegible] a deal for the lease of new grounds for the team next year. A site on Water street was secured, within five minutes walking distance of the centre of the city. Grandstand and bleachers will be built in time for the opening of the season next year.

BALL CHASER GOT GOAT OF "OLD TIMER"

By SID WHIPPLE.

Frank Downs sat on the first base bleachers yesterday afternoon and watched the man with the ladder chase the baseballs down the tracks near the South End grounds. Frank has had almost every privilege ever granted on a sporting field, but this was a new one on him. [illegible] kind and Frank has been losing them right and left for some time.

[illegible] down the line he turned to his friends and remarked: "I wonder if I could get that privilege?" [illegible] to be worth something [illegible]

Al Rockland was also [illegible] interested [illegible] ers with his presence [illegible] at one time that he passed away for a minute [illegible] This was when Umpires Klem and Kane [illegible] and decided that Sweeney was out for "interference" [illegible] with by the [illegible] It was another lesson such as Klem and Kane have passed out since they have been in our midst, and the man who perpetrated that [illegible] his'n from the sports over first [illegible]

CRIPPLED STAR SENDS WORD OF HOPE TO FANS

CHICAGO, Oct. 5.—Baseball is foremost in Johnny Evers's mind and though he lay on his [illegible] West Side hospital suffering from [illegible] ankle, an injury that may keep him out of the national game forever, [illegible] is about the Cubs and their [illegible] win the world's championship.

Johnny mourns his loss to the Cubs but [illegible] for the fray and declares [illegible] would willingly spend the rest of the year in the hospital if he could only play in the coming fight with the Athletics, but [illegible] injury he is not looking in [illegible] belief that his Cubs will win.

Game little fighter that he is and called by many the life of the team, Johnny sees in Zimmerman his [illegible] and sings high praise for the man who will fill his place at second base from now on until the Cubs disband for the year.

As Johnny lay talking to a number of his friends he sent out this message to the baseball world not to worry over the Cubs' chances because of his absence from the game. He said they would win even though he will be out of the lineup. It is the message he wished to send to all of the Cub fans.

Evers Talks of Series.

"Be cheerful Mr. Cub Fan, for we will win the series from the Athletics, and without my assistance.

"I won't be missed. Zimmerman is just as good a ball player as I am and I wouldn't doubt but that he is better for a short series. He is as likely to go in there and break up the games, as he is a much better hitter than I am. Anyway, if it is up to Heinie he will go through with it and the fans can rest assured that I will not be missed.

Wanted to Oppose Collins.

"But, say, it breaks my heart to be out of the series. For weeks and weeks I have been planning just what to do. I was to be pitted against the American League's star second baseman and that is just what suited me. I have read what a demon Collins is in the field, at bat and on the bases and I was figuring just how to hold up my end.

"The advance reports, from what I read, credited us with being the equal and superior of the Athletics in all the departments but at second base. There Collins was heralded as supreme, and I was anxious to go in and do my best. I have been going better than ever before in my life.

I was lining 'em out, getting walks and scoring runs. In fact, I was feeling superb, but now, oh, gee, what's the use. It came and I have to make the best of it.

The Cubs, though, are too smart a team to lose out. We underestimated the Sox in 1906, and that's the reason we lost, but it will never happen again. The American League is inferior to the National League and we wanted to go out and trounce Mack's men just as often as we could.

Doesn't Fear Athletic Twirlers.

Tell the fans not to fear Mack's pitching staff. Do you know that for weeks we have been building the style of attack we would use against them? A fellow with speed and curves will never get by the boys and that's just what Bender, Plank and Coombs rely on. Bender has the overhand delivery and Coombs uses speed with a quick curve and Plank has a cross-fire delivery. Those twisters will never fool the boys, mark what I tell you.

Mack's pitchers have been getting away with victory after victory simply because there is nothing in the American League that amounts to much. The teams are not smart and only play the game the way it is written. But to the Cubs. We work continually to originate plays, the kind the other fellows never think of, and that is the secret of success of the Cubs.

"The boys are pulling together all the time, and each one works for the benefit of the Cubs and not for himself. We are a great team, mind you I'm saying team, and my absence will not weaken the boys the least bit. Zim is a star and he will prove it against the Athletics. He couldn't get a regular job with us, but every time one of us was injured he jumped in and covered himself with glory.

"The Cubs can't lose. No team in the world is their equal, and the Athletics will prove just as easy as did the Tigers the two times we met them, when every one thought Cobb, Crawford, Donovan and the remainder of Jennings's tribe had it on us."

THIS TY COBB NOT OF CLASSY MATERIAL

BOSTON AMERICAN WORLD'S SERIES CONTEST.

I estimate that the Philadelphia Americans (Athletics), and the Chicago Nationals (Cubs), will score as follows in the games for the world's baseball championship for 1910.

First Game—Philadelphia .... Chicago ....
Second Game—Philadelphia .... Chicago ....
Third Game—Philadelphia .... Chicago ....
Fourth Game—Philadelphia .... Chicago ....
Fifth Game—Philadelphia .... Chicago ....
Sixth Game—Philadelphia .... Chicago ....
Seventh Game—Philadelphia .... Chicago ....

They are going to start the world's baseball series between the Cubs and Athletics October 17. That is a week from next Monday. You have less than two weeks, then, to guess out the results and take a slice of that $150 to be given by the BOSTON AMERICAN.

They will play the first two games Monday and Tuesday, October 17 and 18, at Philadelphia. Wednesday following will be an open date to allow for rain or a tie game. Thursday and Friday, October 20 and 21, they will play in Chicago.

The first team to win four games wins the championship. It is possible but not probable that the series will be ended with the last of these two Chicago games.

If they have to play a fifth it will come off Saturday, October 22, at Philadelphia, and if a sixth is necessary, Sunday, October 23 will be the date, and Chicago the place. It may be that after that game each club will have annexed three games. In that case, the seventh will be played at a time and place to be decided later.

[illegible] YOU have to do to be a candidate for one of the fifty-four prizes, amounting to $150, to be given away by the BOSTON AMERICAN, is to guess the results of the games as well as you can and send your guess to the WORLD'S SERIES EDITOR, BOSTON AMERICAN, P. O. BOX 270, Boston. Let the other fellows do the betting. You can do your guessing for prizes without risking anything or without taking any chances at all.

You may guess as often as you wish. The one who guesses the result of the games most accurately will receive $[illegible], the person whose guess is next in accuracy will be awarded $[illegible], the third $17 and the fourth $10. Fifty other guessers next nearest in accuracy will receive $1 each.

In case of ties the guesses postmarked earliest will receive preference, so it is wise to send in your guess early. No guesses will be received after noon of the day upon which the first game between the Cubs and Athletics is played.

JOHNSON WILL RACE OLDFIELD

Johnson has signed the agreement and Oldfield will sign within a few days. He is now at Springfield, Ill. Negotiations for the race have been in progress for two months.

Another announcement of interest to automobile racing enthusiasts was [illegible] to-day. The entry of the three Benz [illegible] in the Grand Prize race, to be run over the Vanderbilt Cup course on October 15, has been rejected by the Motor Cups Holding Company. This action was made known in a letter sent by W. K. Vanderbilt, president of the company, to Jesse Froelich, the Benz representative, returning the entrance fees of the company.

CROSS-COUNTRY TEAM AT DORCHESTER HIGH

Thirty five men have reported for the cross-country team at Dorchester High. This branch of athletics is somewhat foreign to Dorchester High but a number of boys have taken hold and intend to be heard from. Fletcher, the track captain, is a candidate for football and [illegible] temporary captain will be appointed. O'Reilly gave the boys a short [illegible] yesterday and will start them in training by ordering them for a long walk.

FAMOUS PATRON OF THE TURF IS DEAD

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—Lucien O. Appleby, a sportsman of sterling qualities and for many years a power on the American turf, died in a private sanitarium Monday night. The funeral will be at his city residence, No. 611 West End avenue, to-day. The interment will be at Providence, R. I.

Mr. Appleby was in his seventieth year and in his death the turf has lost another of its most valued champions. He was the owner of Silver Brook farm at [illegible] Silver, N. J., and there he bred the mighty Henry of Navarre, a horse destined to take the measure of both Domino and Dobbins.

WESLEYAN PLAYER'S INJURY IS SERIOUS

MIDDLETOWN, Ct., Oct. 5.—Arthur Wright, the Wesleyan football player, who was badly hurt in a game last Saturday afternoon, is still in a critical condition at the hospital in this city. At the operation performed on Monday it was found that he is suffering from a ruptured kidney and a complication of septic poison and peritonitis is threatening.

CUB TWIRLERS MUST BRACE UP TO LAND TITLE

Clark Griffith, manager of the [illegible] team and former [illegible] of the Yankees, believes the [illegible] championship series this year will be the hardest fought that has [illegible] taken place between the pennant winners of the National and American Leagues. In the following story dictated especially for the BOSTON AMERICAN, he tells just what he thinks of the series.

By CLARK GRIFFITH.

I [illegible] the series between the Cubs and Athletics is going to be a wonder. The teams are so evenly matched that I don't really know which team will win. To-day I take the Athletics, to-morrow I [illegible] will take the Cubs [illegible] greatest [illegible]

EX-SINGLE SCULL CHAMPION DEAD

NEW LONDON, Oct. 5.—Daniel J. Murphy, the well-known rower, [illegible] ex-amateur champion [illegible] of America, died here. A few years ago he had typhoid fever and it is believed that his death was a result of that disease, which he contracted while coach at the Leland Stanford University. He will be buried to-morrow. Murphy achieved his [illegible] when he won the single scull championship at the national regatta on the Charles in Aug., 1885.

DOOIN SIGNS UP.

WHO'S LOONEY NOW?

There are two classes of men in Boston: those who have their clothes made at Gale & Kent's and those who don't.

Those who have their clothes made by Gale & Kent wear stylish, neat fitting, handsome garments and their coats are all modelled after the famous registered G. & K. pattern, with "The-front-that-won't-break-down."

They all receive the equally famous G. & K. guarantee of "absolute satisfaction or money back on request, with no argument whatever."

It is because more people know about our methods this year that we are doing the biggest Fall business of our career. Giving everything that every man can reasonably ask and making suits at $15 to $25, is it any wonder that we ask the question at the head of this ad?

Originality in Business

By ARLETTA B. CANFIELD

NO matter what you do, do it in an original way.

If it's nothing more than minding the baby, do it in a way that the baby never experienced before. Give it something to think of. Don't think that if you jig it up and call it "tootsie wootsie" that it is all right.

He hunts out some method whereby he may attract the attention of others. He wants to secure the interest of those who have not heretofore noticed him and knows that he must make some kind of a noise that they have not been hearing in order to get them to listen. That is why some succeed who have not the real worth of others who fall by the wayside.

The dignified lawyer, when he graduates from his course, sets himself down in his office with the firm conviction that clients are coming to him by the score when they see his name on the door, and starves. His comrade, who has other ideas, hustles up among his friends, [illegible] his [illegible] and goes out dangling along the social line and the political line and [illegible] professional line, and all the other lines that he can find, until he has a big acquaintance which turns him in a little [illegible] which unconsciously increases until the first thing you know he is reaping benefits that [illegible]

Then he is recognized as a young man of ability by those on the watch for such creations and thrust ahead into the lime light.

So it is with the doctor, and in any other walk of life that you may [illegible] you do things just according to your own idea and not by following the trail of a noblest others you will attract the public which is constantly watching for an original man.

Don't get the idea into your cranium that you have to sit still with your diploma in your hand and that people will break their necks in a frantic endeavor to reach you.

Get out and get acquainted with the world. You have to know it in your dealings with humanity. Become a friend to everybody by your originality and you will have plenty of clients—of course, this is if you can make good.

Just let a young man get the reputation of being an original individual, and trade will flock to him, for he seems to understand humanity better and everybody wants him.

This is equally true of woman.

How many of you will go to a dressmaker who secures the reputation of being original? The same with the milliner, who, by some little addition to the commonplace hat, will make it into a stylish creation.

The little old-fashioned dressmaker on the corner will be forsaken in a minute and the woman who shows "character" in her productions in an obscure room somewhere else will crawl up into a big shop and plenty of customers just because she gives her things the little touch which shows that she has original thought.

Her productions have "character" according to the gumption of the producer, just as does any other business, and it is no more pronounced, either. Everything about a profession is not found in the text books.

Don't get so busy studying them so hard that you forget to look at their world, which is very much alive.

Study this world with your eyes wide open, study the people in it and start at once to cultivating originality.

It's a good lever to use under any business.

A Runaway Wife

By WINIFRED BLACK

WINIFRED BLACK:

Being in terrible trouble, I would like to ask your advice. My wife, who is only nineteen years old, left me and our sixteen-months-old baby and has gone away with another married man, who has also left a wife and baby.

Now, I love my wife dearly and I want her back so much. She is the only woman in the world for me and she has [illegible] my heart for [illegible] two years. I know [illegible] loves me [illegible] I [illegible] stern and reserved and couldn't see [illegible] she was longing for something [illegible] I did my best [illegible] I thought [illegible] wanted.

She was a good wife, and I didn't know how good [illegible] she had gone. And now, oh, God, how I miss her.

I could have had them arrested the first night by getting a warrant, but [illegible] and her parents didn't want her to get into trouble on account of our [illegible] so we don't know what to do [illegible] with police won't act without a warrant, and that means she would be prosecuted.

I want her so much I would take her right back to my heart and love her so much, and would forget it all if she would only come back. Now, can you see my way and can you give any advice in such a case as to what I could do to get her back? If I could get word to her I know she would come to me, but I don't know exactly where she is and can only get word through the papers. [illegible] I would gladly do [illegible] but my heart [illegible] If I could see her now I would [illegible] on my knees and thank God. Although she has gone astray [illegible] still my wife [illegible] God [illegible] which I shall always do. [illegible] and answer this through the papers, and maybe my wife will see it and give her something to think of. J. I. K.

I HOPE your wife, or the woman who was your wife, will see this letter and read its every word.

If she is any sort of a woman at all, you could not wish her any more bitter [illegible]

But as for you and your trouble, my poor friend, it is not a trouble at all; it is [illegible] escape.

[illegible] Why [illegible] life [illegible] the [illegible] you are [illegible] say [illegible]

[illegible] who takes a woman of this sort [illegible] the most [illegible] for [illegible]

What if she did come back in the body [illegible] mind is not with you [illegible] heart. [illegible] want an empty [illegible] fireside and [illegible] staring into the flames and thinking [illegible] wishing and praying for someone else?

If you did not make this woman happy you did your best. Why blame yourself? Did she make you happy? Do you really believe she can ever make you happy again? Why, every time she was away from you for five minutes you would be torn with jealousy and suspicion.

What she has done once she would be only too likely to do again. She has shown herself a weak, selfish, self-centred, [illegible] Take your little girl in your arms and comfort her, and tear the image of your unworthy wife out of your heart if you are a man and care to expect a man's honest happiness.

"Mersie [illegible] that room."

"Nasty [illegible]," said Amy. "He's so sore on [illegible] you can hear him [illegible] every time he [illegible]"

"Sit down, Amy," insisted Tom. "I have something serious to say to you."

"I suppose [illegible] going to scold me again," she said, sitting on the table. "Oh, well, get it over with."

"I'm not [illegible]," said Tom. "I want to ask [illegible] or two."

"Hurry up, then. Because I'm tired and sleepy."

"I won't [illegible] you any longer than necessary [illegible] This is [illegible] the last [illegible] and I want to get [illegible] things straight."

"You [illegible] as if I'd done something!" [illegible] said resentfully. "What is it?"

"Amy, why [illegible] you lead me to think that you [illegible]"

"I did [illegible]"

"No [illegible]"

"I just knew that you were going to say something like that. It's always [illegible] misunderstood. [illegible] to her emotions without restraint.

"I'm not reproaching you, Amy," said Tom, more gently. [illegible] near to her and laid his hand on her hair.

"You said I was [illegible] that I wasn't frank with you!"

"I've said nothing of the kind. You wilfully misunderstand me."

"I told you everything there was to know, which [illegible] few girls would have done. I never kept anything back. I even let myself [illegible] about on your account and [illegible] for [illegible] the tears [illegible] down the pouting cheeks. "I think I've shown my appreciation. I did all that [illegible] I thought you were satisfied [illegible] like all male human beings, was beginning to find out that woman is [illegible] unfathomable.

"Well, you [illegible] heard me kick!" Amy bit her words out viciously.

"A [illegible] louder than words," said Tom [illegible] Mr. Mickelson."

Tell them how you duped a boy from the country who was fool enough to have [illegible] about women!" He was panting now and glaring at her in a way that threw her into a panic.

"That isn't so!" she gasped. "I never fooled you about anything. It isn't my fault that you have crazy ideas about me."

"No—" he continued, still in a voice pitched so that it might almost have been heard in the street. "I can't blame you if God created the outward features of a good woman and forgot the soul."

"You've got an awful nerve to talk to me like that!" Amy had managed to get past his arm. In the comparative safety beyond it her courage was returning.

"I am speaking the truth, which is more than you can understand." Tom was shaking from [illegible] foot.

Now within easy reach of the door Miss Le Roy could afford to sneer.

GOOD-BYE TO SUPERFLUOUS HAIR

A Lady Will Send Free to Any Sufferer the Secret Which Cured Her

Since a child I was distressed and humiliated by an unwelcome growth of hair on my face and arms. I tried all the depilatories, powders, liquids, creams and other rub-on preparations I ever heard of only to make it worse. For weeks I suffered the electric needle without being rid of my blemish. I spent a great deal of money on various things in vain, until a friend recommended a simple preparation which succeeded where all else failed.

This simple remedy, a harmless, soluble liquid that your own doctor would endorse, enabled me permanently to find entire relief from all trace of unwelcome hair, and forever end my embarrassment. It is simple, safe, sure, and can be used privately at home, without fear of pain or blemish. It makes the electric needle entirely unnecessary.

I will tell in detail full particulars to enable any other sufferer to achieve the same happy results I did privately at home. All I ask is a [illegible] stamp for reply. Address CAROLINE OSGOOD, 110 C, old P. O. St., Providence, R. I.

FRECKLES

October the Month to Get Rid of These Ugly Spots.

Now that the summer is over, the woman with tender skin finds her face covered with ugly freckles and she fears that she has ruined her complexion. "By George, I never saw anything like the effect of that new treatment, Crystolis, for growing new hair and restoring it to its natural colour. It acted more like a miracle than a [illegible] preparation," said a well-known gentleman yesterday in speaking of the revelation that had taken place in his hair. "I began to think there was nothing on earth that could make my hair grow. I tried tonics, bay rum, grease, oil and almost everything else you could think of, but without results. I had been bald for years and began to think it was natural for me to be that way, as my father was entirely bald at 35. Finally I read about the remarkable results being obtained by the use of Crystolis, so I decided to try it myself. Well, when I look at myself in the mirror now I think it is somebody else. I look at least 20 years younger and best of all Crystolis brought about the transformation in just 30 days' time."

Crystolis is a powerful promoter of hair growth, since its discovery a little over a year ago. It has been found to [illegible] marvellous properties for producing a new growth of hair. It [illegible] to restore hair in the worst cases of baldness, dandruff, itching scalp, etc., the results obtained by the experimenters [illegible] most [illegible] In every [illegible] it was found that where there were any hair roots left it would produce a new and luxuriant growth of hair [illegible] from four to six weeks' time [illegible] hair was often restored to its natural colour in from 10 to 16 days' time. In other cases of scalp and hair diseases, such as dandruff, falling hair, itching scalp, etc., it was found that these ailments [illegible] were corrected and often completely cured by two or three applications. This discovery will without doubt put an end to the troublesome scalp and hair diseases that are becoming so common with the American people. Women who have been forced into wearing false hair will greatly welcome this marvellous product as, apart from its many other virtues, it adds a beautiful gloss and lustre to the old hair. Besides, it contains no oil and has a tendency to make the hair light and fluffy. Arrangements have been made with the laboratories where Crystolis is distributed from to furnish free information in regard to this new process to all Boston American readers. The Gift of Being Silent A Most Desirable One

THE girl who submits all her little plans to her next door friend, and airs all her inmost feelings to her newest acquaintance, and who never undertakes anything but that she asks for advice in a dozen different places, is seldom included in our list of climbers.

The girl climber, like her brother, is generally sufficient unto herself when it comes to ideas, convictions, and confidence. She never goes around fizzing with emotion because she is afraid So-and-So might go to the wall, or this, that, or the other thing might turn topsy-turvy, and what's your opinion, please? Don't you think so, too? What would you do if you were in my place?

The strong, capable, brainy girl will never pose as the one who wants advice and assistance. She would think it a confession of weakness. Nor does she boast of what she can do before she can show what she would boast of.

Wearing your heart on your sleeve and your head in that state of careless abandon where it will let out most anything just for the joy of wiggling your tongue is a sure sign of hopeless mediocrity.

As Clyde Fitch noted, you can always see a certain admirable silence about the real climber.

Who hasn't heard of that railroad president who was known as the silent one, and who believed, and proved, that in private plans and personal enterprises silence is not only important, but often, if success is at stake, absolutely essential?

The arguments in favor of silence in your personal affairs are generally these:

If no one knows your plans no one can laugh in his sleeve when they fall to pieces.

If you are not given to crow about what you can do failure won't come half as hard as when everybody can wink and grin about it.

If you want no one's advice but your own you may be saved much self-reproach.

The mind doctors insist that silence in your private undertakings will protect you against the adverse mental influence of your neighbors, and will help to reduce your fear thoughts.

The more you acquaint your friends and associates with your intentions and anticipations, the more they expect the climax of this, the consequence of that, and the sequel of the last chapter, until finally they have wormed the whole Iliad of your existence out of you. Maybe next time you meet these people with a pang of regret.

A clever primary teacher I once knew never could leash her enthusiasm about the puffs received from So-and-so in her career as a teacher. In a pretty, subtle way she would always sing her own praises and rehearse for your benefit all the compliments and bouquets received from inspectors. No one enjoyed her conceited bubblings, and instinctively some of her sister teachers wished that something would happen to chill her enthusiasm.

In the end something did happen which made Miss Swagger forget her wonderful traits and abilities for the time being at least.

"O, everything looks pretty favorable, and I'll surely get a raise next month," I heard a stenographer tell a new acquaintance some time last Fall. And then she went on with a long and lively recital of the pretty things she expected to buy. She would get a new, genuine mink scarf, a blue tailor made and a lot of flimsy accessories.

STOPS ITCHING AT ONCE

A chemist recently discovered that an extract from a particular tree possesses such soothing and curative properties that when applied to eczema and similar diseases it stopped the itching at once. Sufferers who use it are amazed at the quickness of the relief which follows its use. It heals the skin and removes all traces of the disease. The name of this new remedy is Cadum. It is sold by all druggists at 10c and 25c a box. Cadum is equally good for sores, scaly skin, chafings, psoriasis, pimples, itching piles, etc. People who have been afflicted for years with skin troubles and who have tried everything without being relieved, should take fresh courage because this new remedy is different from anything else.

The Laughing Satyr

The Story of a Studio Murder Mystery, from "The Veil of Clay," by Meta Simmins

SYNOPSIS.

RICHARD JARDINE, a London sculptor, on his way to his Watergate studio, in the early morning, finds Beatrice Charters about to throw herself into the Thames River. He stops her and takes her to his studio after he has learned from the young woman that she lost her position as governess because the son of a rich woman employer insisted on making love to her. She is penniless and alone.

Jardine endeavors to help her. When they reach the studio he is called to the floor below, where his sleeping apartments are. Beatrice hears a cry of hate and one of pain in the next room. She opens the door and finds Lewis Stuvessant, the man who had persecuted her with his attentions, lying dead on the floor, a scalpel beside the body and a wound over the heart.

Jardine enters the room as the girl reaches over and picks up the scalpel. He thinks she has killed the man, and believes that Stuvessant was the one who drove her from her position and almost to suicide. Beatrice swoons. Jardine determines to hide the body to save the girl from the gallows. Dominic Fleury, his artist friend, enters just as he has hidden the corpse behind some rolls of canvas. Later Jardine breaks in one side of the clay pedestal of his statue, "The Laughing Satyr," puts the body therein and seals it up, hiding it safely in its veil of clay for the time being.

Mrs. Stuvessant, the mother of the murdered man and a distant cousin of the sculptor, calls at the studio the next day to inquire about her son. She is fearful for his safety. As she leaves with Fleury as an escort to her carriage she sees Mrs. Constance Knowles, Jardine's widowed sister, entering the place. She, too, is seeking Lewis Stuvessant, for she has become engaged to marry him. Fleury tells Mrs. Stuvessant about the strange young woman in the studio, and says that she was found in the streets after losing her place as a governess. Mrs. Stuvessant wonders if the girl is the one whom she discharged under similar circumstances. Mrs. Knowles enters the studio in quest of news of Stuvessant.

Jardine is putting more clay on the statue of "The Laughing Satyr," in which he has hidden the body of the murdered man, when his sister knocks and demands admittance. She asks for Stuvessant, and tells Jardine she is engaged to marry him. Finally the sculptor cannot stand the strain, and asks his sister to go. Then he finishes his work of sealing the body up in the statue of the Satyr.

"The Laughing Satyr" grins down on Jardine until he can stand the secret of the corpse beneath it no longer. He determines to remove Stuvessant's body and breaks the pedestal. The body has disappeared. Horrified and puzzled he leaves the studio to get an afternoon paper, in which there is the story of the finding of the body in the Thames River. He rushes to the morgue and finds that Stuvessant's mother has already arrived there and has identified the body.

Jardine's sister also goes to the morgue and finds her brother and the dead man's mother there. As the three are leaving they meet a beautiful girl, who speaks with a cockney accent, who also identifies the body as that of "her Jim, who had promised to marry her."

The body had been weighted with a dumbbell when thrown into the river and this is one of the clews the police are working on.

FOURTH INSTALMENT.

WHAT could one think? What had he not thought of since that morning: the sight of that single, leaden dumbbell retrieved from the treacherous river, starting up before him on the coroner's table, had given him strange food for thought.

An old-fashioned leaden dumbbell, with the weight 5lb, stamped upon it in numerals a little defaced—where was its companion? Among the slime and mud of the Thames bottom—or lying forgotten among lumber, ready to start up as damning evidence against some man?

There was little conversation between them as they got into a waiting carriage, and, after the funeral, drove to the cemetery.

As Jardine helped Constance to alight at the edge of the broad cemetery walk where the carriages were drawn up, he was relieved to see there was no crowd. All details as to the funeral had been kept profoundly secret; there were only comparatively few people—the dead man's most intimate friends—there besides his mother, and of the number, Jardine recognized only one—Dominic Fleury.

It occasioned him a feeling too poignant to be merely embarrassment to observe that it was to Fleury that Mrs. Stuvessant had turned in her trouble, ostentatiously ignoring him as she had ignored him in the final closing episode of her interview with him in the studio at Watergate street on the morning when she had come to tell him of her first fear.

But Jardine knew that she did not ignore him in her thoughts.

It was Fleury who helped her to alight and gave her his arm to the new-cut grave situated down a little side path leading off the main roadway, where the carriages were drawn up.

Remembering the upleaping look of suspicion in Fleury's eyes—and how he had silenced that look—Jardine felt a little creeping horror stir his nerves as his eyes followed the slow progress of the two figures—the tall, broad-shouldered man and the equally tall woman in her voluminous black draperies.

Had Mrs. Mrs. Stuvessant told Fleury yet how he had denied the fact of that telephone call and his answer? And, is so, what were Fleury's thoughts?

The bleak wind that caught at the veils draping the women's hats and sent them twisting about their necks or billowing out about them grotesquely, played elfish tricks with the surplices of the clergymen and the five choristers who had come from the church in Mayfair which Mrs. Stuvessant attended spasmodically to assist at the funeral of the man who in life had mocked at all religion.

"Dick * * * For a moment he had forgotten Constance, and the swift clasp of her hand on his wrist startled him. With a sudden sense of shock he became aware that the mellow rhythm of the clergyman's chanting voice had been cut abruptly by an ugly sound, the sound of the shrill piercing cry of a woman in angry pain.

"Let me go——" The cry had taken words. "You would, would yer? Ah, you brute, let me pass!" And then, the increasing note of agony in the cry robbed it of its blatant shrillness. "Oh * * * Let he see the lawst of him! Let me see the lawst o' my Jim!"

IT was as though the sudden irruption of this incongruous figure, the girl with the face from which defiant grief had blotted out all beauty, had cast a petrified silence over the group gathered round the grave.

Just for a moment Jardine had a strange impression—the scene seemed to hang before his eyes like some pictorial representation rather than an actual happening. Life and animation were suspended, that last cry, hot from the crucible of a woman's heart, had cast a spell upon them, and the utterer of the cry seemed to be drawn within the circle of it.

She stood motionless in the vacant space at the graveside, for which she had made a mad rush, glancing defiantly round her, her eyes were red and swollen with weeping and her vivid lips had an ugly, sullen droop. She was carrying a flat, rush-planted hamper filled with violets, whose earthly fragrance came to Jardine where he stood; he asked himself almost disgustedly how he had ever imagined her beautiful; with that flower-heaped basket on her arm, in her ugly, shapeless black garments, she seemed to-day only very typical of the London flower girls.

The spell of silence snapped; the girl flung our her hand with a fierce, eloquent gesture toward the amazed, hesitating group.

Her voice broke in her throat with a harsh, guttural note. She flung up the back of her disengaged hand against her eyes, pushed back the masses of flaming hair topped by the unwieldy hat with its nodding plumes.

It was terrible, sacrilegious, this interruption by a shrill-voiced cockney girl, of whom it was difficult to think charitably. The Reverend Nicholas Colherne was horrified and shocked. His handsome, expressive face showed these emotions clearly, but he did not lose his presence of mind, as the laymen of the gathering appeared to have done.

He put out a shapely ringed hand and touched the intruder on the arm.

"Hush! my good girl—this interruption is most untimely," he said in a low voice. "You must try and control yourself—or else leave the graveyard." While he spoke Mr. Colherne was making eloquent signs to the men to remove her, if necessary, by force.

"Don't good girl me," she cried savagely. Jess Jacoby's my name, and I'm not ashamed of it, and I'd have you know I've as much right 'ere—more right than any of yer—it's my chap you're burrin'; perhaps yer don't know that, eh? My chap—they may call 'im what they jolly well like—but it's my Jim as is lying there—my Jim as was to 'ave married me——"

Again the voice broke harshly. Jardine felt a little sweat break out upon his brow, there was such horrible conviction in that voice. What was Fleury thinking of that he did not at once take steps to stop this scene? He did not dare to glance at Constance, but his hand closed for an instant on hers, clinging convulsively to his arm.

"Will no one remove this shameless lying woman?"

With a voice well-nigh as shrill, a violence of gesture hardly less restrained than Jess Jacoby's own, Mrs. Stuvessant had stepped forward. Forgetful of Constance, Jardine, on the outskirts of the crowd, moved also. He dreaded what might happen if Mrs. Stuvessant lost her self-control; he had a vivid recollection of his mother's occasional half-mad outbreaks of hysterical passion.

"Remove me?" Jess repeated insolently. "And who are you to have me removed?"

She faced her, one hand on her hip, ready for battle. It was very sordid, very ugly, this scene—a fitting sequel to an ugly, sordid life, Jardine thought—more fitting than the beautiful words, pulsating with hope, of the solemn service it had interrupted.

"I am his mother."

There was the dignity of maternity in voice and pose as Mrs. Stuvessant spoke—a dignity that might have cowed another woman, but not this wild-eyed, red-haired creature.

Jardine realized that Mrs. Stuvessant was not going to lose her self-control. The veneer had cracked ominously for a moment, that was all.

"His mother? Ah, yer may be his mother or not—I don't care that whether yer are or not"—she flung up her hand in the elder woman's face with a gesture of superb contempt. "But I was more to 'im than all the mothers as ever was born—I was to 'ave been 'is wife," she cried.

With a great bursting sob she turned and flung the heaped violets in her basket pell-mell into the open grave; they fell on the coffin with a soft, pattering sound like rain.

"And it's mine he'll be at Judgment Day," she cried. Without a backward glance she shouldered her way through the crowd; no man put out a hand or raised a voice to detain her.

And once again Jardine wondered what paralysis of inaction had held Fleury dumb—Fleury, who had the gift of tact, who had averted uglier scenes than this. But Dominic Fleury had disappeared. At the first sight of that black-clad girl with the flaming hair he had drawn back among the crowd as though he dreaded to meet her eyes.

To Be Continued To-morrow.

Try This Home-Made Cough Remedy

Costs Little, But Does the Work Quickly, or Money Refunded.

Mix one pint of granulated sugar with ½ pint of warm water, and stir for 2 minutes. Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a pint bottle; then add the Sugar Syrup. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours.

You will find that this simple remedy takes hold of a cough more quickly than anything else you ever used. Usually ends a deep-seated cough inside of 24 hours. Splendid, too, for whooping cough, chest pains, bronchitis and other throat troubles. It stimulates the appetite and is slightly laxative, which helps end a cough.

This recipe makes more and better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for $2.50. It keeps perfectly and tastes pleasant.

Pinex is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, and is rich in guaiacol and all the natural pine elements which are so healing to the membranes. Other preparations will not work in this formula.

This plan of making cough syrup with Pinex and Sugar Syrup (or strained honey) has proven so popular throughout the United States and Canada that it is often imitated. But the old, successful formula has never been equalled.

A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this recipe. Your druggist has Pinex or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Society Set Hurries Home from Foreign Lands

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

Now that the Summer is over the society birds of passage are gradually getting back to Winter quarters and this is especially true of the wanderers abroad. Each incoming vessel brings a full quota of them—rested and refreshed after a Summer in foreign lands and with their trunks crammed with the frills and furbelows in which they will grace the gay events of the coming season.

ALMOST THE SAME

A WASHINGTON man inadvertently overheard some tender exchanges between a recently betrothed couple who, it chanced, attended some social function at the national capital to which the aforesaid Washingtonian was also asked.

"Just think, dear heart," exclaimed the young woman, "you proposed to me but twenty-four hours ago!"

"Yes, sweetheart," came in thrilling tones from the fortunate man, "and it seems as though it were but yesterday!"

MAJOR SHORT TELLS HOW TO BECOME AN IDEAL BOY SCOUT

By MAJ. EDWIN RANDOLPH SHORT

Although we have been over the ground before, I think I will stop long enough to-day to tell all the boys who are thinking of becoming American Boy Scouts just what they ought to do by way of making application for enlistment and how to form a patrol.

If you know of some boys in your part of the city, or in your town or village, who have already enlisted as scouts, it will be an easy matter for you to join them. If you do not know any write to the Secretary of the New England Headquarters, No. 5 Bromfield street, and tell him you want to become an American Boy Scout. He will send you an application blank, which you must fill out, and which your father or mother or guardian must sign, and when it is received back from you, he will assign you to the nearest patrol to your home.

Perhaps you may belong to the Boys' Brigade or some of the cadet societies where the boys have already had enough military drill to give them the necessary discipline, which must be obtained before the scout work can begin. In this case it would be a good plan for you to organize a patrol amongst your fellow members in the brigade or the cadet society.

How to Start Patrol.

If you do not hold membership in any such organization pick out at least six or seven of your best friends who are between the ages of ten and eighteen years. If you can get eleven, ten besides yourself, and if the boys are between the ages of thirteen and sixteen, it would be much better, as you would find it much more congenial.

When you have done this and have sent the applications (which the New England Headquarters will give you) try and find some reputable man in your neighborhood who has had some military experience who will serve as a Scout master. If you cannot find any such Scout master, report the fact to the New England Headquarters and one will be assigned to you.

Now just one thing more. I want to say something about the boy who is going to make a Scout. The lad who will be the most successful American Boy Scout will be between the ages of thirteen and sixteen, and as nearly as possible have perfect lungs, sight, limbs and hearing.

The regulations permit boys as young as ten to enlist, but they should be kept together in their own patrols as much as possible, as a boy of ten cannot do the work of a boy four or five years older.

And you know, boys, that you do not like to play with a little fellow four or five years younger than you.

The Ideal Scout.

The ideal Scout must also be a happy boy and not a "grouch." No matter what annoys him he must always smile. You will find, as you go along with Scout work, that there are many times when you will have to use your good nature. You will be put to many a hard test. The American Boy Scout must always be prepared to "rough" it without a whimper. The boy who is always grumbling, who is picking on his smaller fellows, who secretly and in a sneaking way disobeys orders, is not wanted as an American Boy Scout.

The ideal American Boy Scout must be self-reliant and trustworthy, because upon this boy may depend the safety of an entire patrol in an emergency or the whole success of a game or Scout tactics may depend upon the way every American Boy Scout obeys orders.

I will conclude to-day with a little story about a real Scout's adventure in real life. I will call it "A Ride for Help."

A Ride for Help.

In the seventies, eight troops of cavalry were sent out to drive back the Indians onto the reservations, during the Messiah craze. Four troops were sent to deploy, so that Captain C.'s battalion would be about fifteen miles from that of Major B.'s. The scout was with Major B.'s battalion, which had been separated from Captain C. for four days, expecting the following day to join him at the appointed meeting place, but in the morning, before daybreak, the battalion was attacked by Indians. They were encamped on a high piece of tableland, from which ran a ravine some six or seven miles long. The Indians kept them confined to this piece of tableland for four days. They were unable to get even down to the river to get water, owing to the very large number of Indians assembled on the hills.

On the fourth day that they had been detained by Indians, Major B. decided to send for Captain C.'s battalion for reinforcements, and called for a volunteer to undertake the trip. The chances of success in reaching Captain C.'s camp were slim. Four men at once stepped to the front.

"One man is all that can go," said Major B. "More than that would attract too much attention. You four men decide this between yourselves, and then report to me."

Instantaneously, the four men stepped one pace to the front as one man, and after a moment's consultation with the officers, it was decided to have these four men draw straws. The one drawing the shortest straw would be the man to undertake the journey.

Draw Straws for Task.

An officer went to one of the four men giving him the first chance. He declined to draw, owing to his rank, fearing that if he drew the long straw, favoritism might be evident. The next man followed his example. Then the officer went to those who were left, who were of lower rank, and the men proceeded to draw. When he came to the man who was highest in rank, to whom he had offered the first chance, and opened his hand for him to draw, it was found that he had the shortest straw, and was the one to undertake the dangerous mission.

Major B. then said: "Scout, you can have any horse in this command, even mine."

The scout replied, "I have ridden my horse for almost three years. I have never touched him with the spur or whip. We understand each other, and will win or lose together. You have an Indian saddle—I mean that one with the little cushion—a pair of surcingles and stirrups. I should like that, and one more revolver."

Since the scout was superstitious, he would not take a revolver directly from any one, but simply placed his right hand over his right shoulder and some one placed a revolver in it. Then he unbuckled his cartridge belt, and said to one of his comrades: "Clean these revolvers so that there is no dirt on them and everything works perfectly. Now leave me alone, for I want to write some letters."

He said: "I wish my horse could have some water."

Some fifteen men, under cover of the four troops, tried to reach the water. They took about twenty vessels, and on their return three were wounded, and not a whole pail of water was brought back, every vessel being punctured.

Off on Perilous Trip.

At 11 o'clock that night the scout reported that he was ready, and received from his commander a dispatch for Captain C. He then placed his hands on the nostrils of his horse to prevent his whinnying to his comrades, leading him down the incline into the canyon, stopping every few moments to listen. After he had gone about fifty yards, he decided to mount. He had hardly placed himself in the saddle when he was discovered by the Indians. They commenced firing sharply and furiously. On each side of the canyon the Indians were following him down, and closing in behind him.

They could have hit him easily, but they desired to capture him alive, so that they could show his comrades that he had failed, and then torture him in their sight.

Mile after mile they went, and yet the scout was not hit. Just before reaching the opening, as he thought, which turned out to be a bluff of light-colored earth which deceived him, he was compelled to retrace his steps some fifty yards. In taking up the main trail, the Indians in the rear were so close to him that the Indian's pony's nose was on the rump of the scout's horse.

Then for the first time the scout fired and the pony dropped. A second later he noticed another pony in the same position. He killed him, and the Indian, sliding off his horse, grabbed the tail of the scout's horse, and the scout shot the Indian through the head.

Escape from Enemy.

Just as the scout was leaving the opening, they shot his horse just back of the cinch. The scout, not wishing them to secure his horse, and not knowing how badly he was injured, shot him through the ear, killing him, so that the Indians might not get him, then jumped into the river which was just by, the Indians following along the banks on both sides of the river, and firing into the water. He stayed under water so long that they expected he was drowned, and sat down on the bank to smoke. He then quietly floated down the river on his back for about a mile, and then worked over to the left bank.

After listening a moment, he then arose and proceeded on foot as quickly as he could, and after traveling some seven miles, arrived at Captain C.'s command. The hours were somewhere between 3 and 4 a. m. After entering the camp lines, he went to the captain's tent, and informed him of the peril of Major B.'s battalion. In a few moments, Captain C.'s battalion was on the way to the relief of Major B., and when the Indians saw Captain C. and his men coming, they fled, and the battalion was saved.

$10,000,000 IMPROVEMENTS FOR THE B. & M.

President Mellen, Vice-President Byrnes and General Manager Barr of the Boston & Maine are to-day making an inspection of the White Mountain division of the road for the purpose of seeing where portions of the $10,000,000 appropriated yesterday for improvements can best be expended. The official trip will take three days and before it is completed the three officials will have inspected nearly all of the northern trackage of the road.

The expenditure of the vast sum appropriated yesterday, the largest amount ever spent for improvements in the history of the road, will be commenced at once. The appropriation is to be divided in the following manner: One hundred locomotives of the latest Atlantic and Pacific type are to be purchased, using up $2,000,000 of the fund.

Three Hundred Modern Coaches.

Then 300 up-to-date passenger coaches have been ordered, which will take nearly $3,000,000 more. Finally $3,000,000 is to be spent on the completion of the machine shops now under construction at East Somerville. The balance of the appropriation, approximately $2,000,000, is to be spent on trackage and general reconstruction.

The most important item decided upon in the way of trackage improvements is the double tracking of the Worcester, Nashua & Portland Division. A heavy freight and passenger business between New York and Maine goes over this road, and the old equipment has been weakened. Also the big Summer passenger business between New York and Bar Harbor over this division demands the best equipment.

Using New Haven Engines.

To-day for the first time New Haven engines were seen on the Boston & Maine road. One was put into service on the Portland division. Nine others will follow, increasing the road's equipment by ten locomotives.

In addition to the plans for new improvements, work now under construction is to be hurried. Work on the Lynn crossing originally planned to cover a period of two years has been ordered completed by July 28th, 1911.

Bridges now too weak to support the new heavy type of locomotives are to be strengthened. Every bridge on the Fitchburg division is to be reconstructed. An appropriation of $200,000 has already been made for this and the work will be rushed to completion.

The Vanderbilt Cup Race Number of MoToR

Is Now Out—On Sale at All Newsstands

The October number of MoToR, the National Magazine of Motoring, contains the complete story of every Vanderbilt Cup Race ever run, and also of all the other automobile road races of the world.

This article is a complete historical account of every motor race from the Times-Herald race, in 1895, down to the last big race at Elgin, this year.

It gives a table of speeds ranging from less than 10 miles an hour in the 1895 race, to Nazarro's terrific Florio Cup average of over 74 miles an hour.

Anything you may want to know about automobile road racing, you will find in this entertaining, exhaustive article.

This account is profusely illustrated with nearly one hundred photographs of the winners of every race from the first winner, which was a four horsepower Duryea, to the fastest, Nazarro's Fiat, and the latest, Mulford's Lozier.

DRIVERS NOT TO BLAME FOR CUP RACE DEATHS

By J. C. KERRISON.

The action of the Supervisors of Nassau County in continuing the permit for the Grand Prize race of October 15, was nothing more than those who have been interested in the sport had anticipated. These races bring to Long Island considerable revenue each year, and it means considerable to the natives.

The great majority of the accidents in the recent Vanderbilt were not by any means as a result of the reckless daring of the men, or of the poor road surface, although it must be admitted that both these conditions were present to a degree. The accidents, in the main, were the result of gross carelessness upon the part of individuals who encroached upon forbidden territory, and they are now paying the penalty.

With the decision of the Nassau County Supervisors to the effect that the race could be held, provided it was started at 10 o'clock in the morning, and the course was more properly controlled than was the case in the Vanderbilt.

The men entered in the race have renewed their training with vigor and determination to win. It is true that they are not, as of old, driving on the course at the present time, as the great bulk of them are in Philadelphia, getting into shape for the race to be held there next Saturday.

After the Fairmount Park race, which, by the way, will prove one of the big events of the year, the men will return to Long Island and go into practice for the last big race that will be held in the East this season.

Harry Grant, the winner of the Vanderbilt, is entered for both these contests, and he and his mechanic, Frank Lee, feel confident that they can render a good account of themselves in these events.

While the big road races are being followed, and the bulk of interest is being attracted by them, the Commercial Vehicle Contest of the BOSTON AMERICAN, on October 21 and 22, is not by any means being lost sight of.

There were received yesterday, five additional entries, placing the total number, so far received, at twenty. Fully that many more have signified their intention of competing, but have, as yet, failed to send in their entries.

Of the five entries received yesterday, four were Grabowsky's, two being entered for Class B and two for Class C of the manufacturers' division. The other car was a Rapid Truck, entered for Class B of the private owners' division by Mr. Backus of Wellesley, Mass.

The private owners' division of the run is not showing up as strong as are the others, there being a lack of entry in the same, but, as there was something like two weeks more before the entries close, it is expected that many of the firms using trucks in their business will make entries.

The five-ton class will be one of the big events of the run, and will bring to Boston some of the largest trucks that have yet been seen in this city.

MATTHEW C. BRUSH COMES TO ELEVATED

Matthew C. Brush, former general manager of the Boston & Suburban Street Railway Company, and now vice-president and general manager of the Buffalo and Lake Erie street railway, the Jamestown, Chautauqua and Lake Erie steam railway company and the Chautauqua Steamboat company, is to enter the service of the Boston Elevated Railway. He will be assistant to the vice-president. This was announced by Gen. William A. Bancroft, president of the Elevated, to-day. Mr. Brush will arrive here Monday from Buffalo.

EXPRESS PERMIT GRANTED.

The Railroad Commissioners have approved the petition of Ernest C. Rust, George L. Byron and Forest L. Hills to carry on an express business on the passenger trains of the Boston & Maine Railroad between Boston and Ipswich and Amesbury.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS

STATE ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

Some call it a Hawley-Gates market, but in a sense this is a misnomer. These gentlemen are active enough in the stocks in which they are immediately interested, but at the moment it also is a Rockefeller-Morgan-Hill market as well.

$ $

Net changes in prices for the day are not so important as the evidence of greater public interest. This interest is particularly noticed in the bond department, sales running ahead on the exchange and bond houses reporting a better inquiry privately.

$ $ $

The Atlantic Coast Line broke the deadlock in the steel rail business by ordering 15,000 tons from the Tennessee Coal and Iron Company. Another order for 5,000 tons is talked of to be placed in the near future. A better demand for pig iron is reported. Copper metal is also in better demand.

$ $ $

The increased demand for stocks on the part of the commission houses is being supplied by the large interests, partly in the way of profit-taking. Further than this, the securities so bought tend to strengthen the list so long as the tendency is upward, but in case of weakness they would be a menace to the entire list.

$ $ $

The market continues to be one of specialties, and the stop-loss order is much in evidence. The bears have not been having an easy time of it, as the bulls have been gunning for the stops placed by the shorts and caught many of them.

$ $ $

Not long ago the market was sold to a standstill; it was sold out, in other words. Previous to that it sank of its own weight, and now it has gone up because of the stimulus of prearranged and careful buying. In the best circles in the Street the watchword is caution, which is taken to mean that at no time is it advisable to over-extend.

Atchison, by failing to reserve anything for future expenditures where $5,000,000 was reserved last year, managed to show an increase in surplus of $1,410,553. This comes almost entirely from premiums on securities sold, the actual surplus from operation being only $365,846. The road paid out in dividends for the year $1,495,480 more than in 1909, which almost offsets the $5,000,000 item. Owing to the increase of the capital stock, the road showed earnings for the year of 8.89 per cent, compared with 12.1 per cent, the previous year.

If it were not for the international balance of trade running so heavily against the United States, State street could take comfort in a look ahead in business. The Boston & Maine has authorized the purchase of 300 passenger cars and 100 locomotives. In several other directions there are signs of good business, but bankers are afraid the London banks will persist in their refusal to accept cotton bills freely without indorsement, thereby interrupting the free movement of that staple. The fears of the foreigners are absurd, but they persist in their stand with remarkable determination.

Some western banks are of the opinion that Aldrich money will have to be issued before the end of the year. It will, if the stock market gets much more active than it is at present, but the issue of that money will not be a shock to the public, for the way has been paved by the organization of currency associations.

There is some gossip among floor traders on the Stock Exchange that a drive at the shorts in Union Pacific stock is planned. According to the reports noted there are a good many bear stop orders around the 170 level. The stock is well in hand now and the sentiment in the street is that it would not require much effort or money to put it quite a bit higher than it is. The shorts are becoming more or less uneasy.

WALL STREET MARKET STRONG

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—Northern Pacific was the bright feature during the early trading in Wall Street to-day. Opening at 118⅝, this stock moved upward until it touched 119½, the highest price scored by this issue in many weeks.

The market was fairly strong at the opening, with the standard railroad shares and the low-priced industrials quoting fractional gains in most instances. A bullish sentiment prevailed throughout the early trading. After the first twenty-five minutes of trading, a reaction set in, and declines were quoted in some stocks. Union Pacific was the leader in the downward movement, quoting a loss ⅜ on a point. Steel was a fraction higher, and considerable trading was indulged in in this issue.

In London American stocks sold off early and failed to rally. At the close of the first hour's trading they were quoting losses of from ¼ to 1 point. The reports that reached London during the early day concerning the revolution in Portugal were the cause of the break in the market. Portuguese and Spanish bonds declined rapidly. Spanish bonds sold down about forty points.

The curb market was fairly active, although there was no material change in prices.

LOST AND FOUND

Diamond rings are pretty precious things to lose, and often times the loser finds it only after a long and tedious hunt. A simple remedy in all cases of lost articles of whatever description is a two or three-line ad. under this column telling in a brief way about the article lost. The real hunt is on the minute your ad. appears, and there will be no long waiting for the article to be returned.

A FEW PEOPLE DON'T USE AMERICAN WANT ADS

For the same reason that modern methods were once scoffed at by our forefathers, yet, in spite of prejudice, progress has its way. The successful majority employ the "WANT AD WAY" to secure tenants, or buyers, or help, or employment. They employ the AMERICAN, realizing that it is the only paper which will carry their message to nearly all of the people.

Massachusetts Democrats and Their Opportunity

Some Suggestions That Are Respectfully Referred to the Men Who Will Meet in Faneuil Hall To-morrow

Two political State conventions will be held in Boston to-morrow. They should offer striking contrasts in many features and developments.

One, the Democratic, will have an opportunity to make history and prepare the way for great service to the Commonwealth.

The other, the Republican, will have no opportunity to break away from the service of the Special Interests. It will be absolutely dominated by a Machine and ruled by Bosses.

Its work will be mere routine. The slate of candidates has been made up and the same old combination platform of "point with pride" and Stand-Pat elements has been dictated. All the Republican delegates will have to do will be to clap hands and say aye.

A healthy protest against the Lodge-Draper program in to-morrow's Republican convention would be just about as effective as a polite objection to Boss Murphy's orders would have been in the New York Democratic convention.

The Democratic party has a splendid chance. But, if it would rise to the occasion, it must come with high resolves, strong candidates and enthusiastic spirits from a convention unsmirched and untainted by Bossism.

There has been a great deal of talk of late to the effect that "this is a Democratic year."

That remains to be seen. It depends entirely upon the good sense of the Democratic party.

Democratic victories in this State would have been more numerous if the party leaders had taken advantage of the many opportunities for success.

Time after time the opportunity to elect a Governor has been headed in the Democratic direction only to be side-tracked by Republican cleverness or Democratic foolishness.

Democratic Governors of Massachusetts have been elected only when the party presented strong candidates and submitted platforms which had the true ring of progress, which were sincere pledges of an honest purpose to promote measures for the benefit of all the people of the Commonwealth.

To win, the Democrats must put forward candidates and submit a platform that will appeal to the independent voters and the Republican voters of independent tendencies, as well as to the voters of the Democratic party.

The people of the State know the dangers of the partnership existing between the Republican party and the Special Interests, and they realize keenly the burdens that have been imposed upon them by the granting of special privileges to the Special Interests.

The farmers of the State will resent the treatment they received from the Republican Legislature. And there is a general belief among them that Governor Draper has been more anxious to please the railroad moguls than to protect the farmers' interests.

Workingmen are convinced that there is no hope for proper labor legislation from a Republican Legislature and Governor.

Voters who desire a hand in the direct nomination of candidates for office and favor the popular election of United States Senators know that the Republican party stands as a big obstacle in the way of these reforms.

Taxpayers who believe there has been extravagance and waste, if not graft, in the conduct of State affairs, and that there is more need of a finance commission for the investigation of State departments than there ever was for the investigation of any municipality, understand that they must turn the Republicans out of power in order that thorough investigations may be made and abuses corrected.

The Democratic platform must pledge itself to dispense justice to all classes—to the corporation and the merchant, to the farmer and the laborer, to the mechanic and the manufacturers, to the association and the individual.

People have grown tired of the system of bossism which has grown up in the Republican party and which marks for advancement its favorites and for slaughter those that oppose its wishes.

If the Democrats would have this a Democratic year; if they would be successful at the polls on State election day, they must conduct a convention to-morrow in the utmost spirit of fairness and honest deliberation. There must be no ground for suspicion of machine dictation or of boss rule.

This is a year for the killing off of arrogant political bosses; it is a year for honest, unselfish, patriotic leadership.

Success for the Democratic party cannot be wrought through a display of selfish leadership or spite or revenge.

There are but two things for the convention delegates at Faneuil Hall to-morrow to decide.

First, the platform. It should be built of issues vitally affecting the interests of the people. And it should be written in plain, simple language.

Second, the candidates. They should be men who best typify the principles of the platform and whose nominations are an earnest of the determination of the party to carry forward the reforms.

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

DELETERIOUS DRINKS

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Under the above caption I desire to give my views to your thousands of readers as to the forbearance of a long-suffering public. During the past several months I have visited many towns and I can truthfully assert that in the greater number the tubes of a great many of the drinking apparatuses were foul with sub-acetate of copper (verdigris). Now, Mr. Editor, any one who is familiar with the medical properties of the above drug, knows that it is considered a rank poison and rarely ever administered internally. Without a doubt, some of those tubes hadn't been properly cleaned for several weeks. It is a sad commentary on the effectiveness of the boasted Pure Food law when such lax legal conditions will allow its vast numbers of drinking apparatus to be operated without ever being inspected. A tube that stands idle over Sunday, or even over night, will become contaminated with the deadly drug. Every State in the Union should have laws governing the sanitary conditions of all such public places, and they should be inspected by properly appointed officials, at least once a week. Persons who drink from contaminated tubes are simply committing a slow suicidal act. The Legislatures of the various States should enact a law that will right the great wrong forced upon an unsuspecting and thirsty public.

JOHN A. SIGLER.

UNWHOLESOME FOOD

Having read your paper for a great many years, and having found it is read by all classes of people, rich and poor, I wish you to allow me some of your valuable space to make an appeal, and at the same time suggest to the people of leisure that there is a great opportunity for service waiting for them. They could obliterate their name of being a useless class, and win instead the respect and thanks of he people.

The opportunity waiting for them is to organize a club whose duty will be to see that the restaurants of our city serve pure and wholesome food. In order to do it effectively, they could get from the city government the right to visit every restaurant and see that the food shall be fresh and pure. They could also see that all food left at the end of the day is thrown into the garbage can.

The members of this club could voluntarily give three or four hours each day to the duties of the organization. If they would organize a club like this, they could render a great service to the people and at the same time prevent much sickness caused by unwholesome food. J. GITLIN.

DR. PARKHURST'S ARTICLE

COINING THE HEART'S BLOOD OF THE POOR

Written for the Boston American

By Dr. C. H. Parkhurst

Copyright, 1910, by American-Journal-Examiner

WHEN I was a boy selling wares over the counter of a dry goods store the articles dealt in were tagged, and the tag was marked with the selling price, and also—in blind characters—with the cost price.

Of course, the latter denoted simply what the proprietor of the store had paid the wholesale dealer from whom the goods were originally acquired. There was nothing remarkable in this, for it is probably only what is everywhere customary with retail dealers and a young dry goods clerk could not be expected to have any interest in the two markings, except as they gave him an opportunity to see how much his employer made out of sales transactions.

Real Cost of Goods the Toil Put in Them

There was more suggested by the cost markings, however, than the boy behind the counter would be likely to discover, or imagine; for while they indicated the MONEY cost of the tagged article, they said nothing about another kind of cost that had gone into it, in the weariness, perhaps, and exhaustion and disheartened toil, it may be, of the one or ones that were its original producers.

If upon the goods which we purchase there were, in addition to the dollar and cents figures, a little record of the way in which the articles had been wrought, the long, late hours that had been spent, the worn fingers that were the penalty, and very often the enfeebled eyes and dimmed vision, we might discover in them an exceedingly tearful and tragic story, and might come to regard our possession of them with diminished satisfaction, and, instead of priding ourselves on the cheap rates at which we had been able to obtain them, might find in them a pathetic souvenir of burdens wearledly borne, and pains silently and hopelessly suffered.

The luxuries of those of us who live very comfortable lives we do not ourselves pay for, except in part. Somebody has to pay for them, and very often it is the poor, the very poor, that lay down the purchase money in the shape of toil, broken health and even shortened life.

Revelers of Luxury Beneficiaries of Destitute

It is sad and even humiliating to reflect to how large degree those who are in circumstances of comfort and even of luxury are the beneficiaries of the destitute.

It may be that out of our abundance we are in the habit of doing something for the POOR; but there are tens of thousands in such cities as New York and Chicago that, in proportion to their means, are doing even MORE for the rich men and women, that are in slavery to the opulent classes, and who do not get as large a return for their services in the way of shelter and food as did the negroes in the days of Southern servitude.

The economic slavery of people who are nominally free dishonors our civilization and shames our Christianity.

There is not one good word to be said for an economic condition wherein the cheapness of commodities is rendered possible by the underpay or overwork of those who produce those commodities.

We make out a check hastily and carelessly for the coal that is put in our bin in the Autumn. How many of us, when we look upon the heaps of glistening anthracite, stop to inquire whether the amount we pay for it includes adequate compensation to the ultimate producers by whom the coal was mined?

Those Who Toil to Make Our Hearth Cheerful

And when we gather around the open grate, revelling in the luxury of brightness and warmth which it radiates, do we or do we not sometimes raise the inquiry as to whether the life conveniences and comforts of those who toil in the pit sustain any just proportion to the conveniences and comforts of us who enjoy the results of their toil and peril?

Are we Christian enough to think what it means for us to enjoy repose at the expense of their servitude, and to have our life nourished at the expense of their health and their blood?

What valid Christian reason is there why the poor should be hungry in order that the rich may surfeit? That the poor should overwork in order that the wealthy may overrest? That the poor should live in dark dirty, unventilated, unsanitary tenements in order that others should reside in palaces?

Who is there that will deny the justice and the Christianity of the proposition that the man who by his labor helps to make me comfortable should himself be made comfortable? That the man who by his work renders it necessary for me to overwork should himself be secured against overwork Cannibalism is the practice of feeding on one's neighbor and involves the same quality of gross fiendishness when done in a civilized country as when done by barbarians.

Unearned Increment

By MILO HASTINGS

MANY people labor under the notion that water power must, from the very nature of it, be cheaper than steam power. As a matter of fact, only about one-tenth of the fifty million horsepower used in the United States comes from our streams. Fu power predominates for the simple reason that it is cheaper to dig coal and operate dams, turbines and power transmission systems.

According to the hydrographer of the United States Geological Survey, our streams have a minimum flow available for power purposes about equal to the total power consumption of the country at the present time, but the final limit could be increased to two hundred million horsepower by the building of reservoirs to retain the Spring freshets.

Our power consumption is doubling every decade, and our coal supply is limited and its exhaustion a mater of calculation. As a result, we know that water rights, which are to-day of little or no value, will in the future be worth fabulous sums, for, as the price of power rises and, with improved equipment, the cost be left to credit, an ever increasing amount will be left to credit to the sun's energy, which lifts the water to the mountain top, whence it may run down and make the wheel go round.

This earning power of nature is known to the economist as rent, and the increased value of a natural resource that comes from humanity's increasing needs is the unearned increment.

Upon the fundamental wrong to the many that comes from the few, thus capitalizing man's growing needs for nature's bounty, Henry George based his justly famed plea for single tax, which virtually means government ownership of all natural resources, thus securing the unearned increment for the people.

Against the theoretical justice of single tax no economist has ever been able to frame a successful argument, but the problem of the private ownership of our farm lands has not worried us because such a very large representative part of our population have been land-owning farmers; and, knowing that he is robbed in so many other ways, even the city consumer has been tolerant with the farmer's getting the unearned increment on his land.

The monopolization of forests and mines and power sites is a thing alike in principle, but different in effect. The private ownership of land by farmers breeds homes and democracy, but the private ownership of such resources as form the basis of gross corporate wealth breeds political corruption and solicits foraging expeditions from the emasculated nobility of Europe.

The present conservation policy of the retention of such resources, either for Governmental development or to be leased for private development under Government supervision, appears to be a serious effort to sever the chain that has bound progress to poverty.

After all, the difference between the radical, the progressive and the honest conservative is not so much a matter of what each wants to do, but of how fast he believes it can be done. Between the radical, who would knock the old props out before he builds new ones, and the conservative, who has to hustle to keep the weeds of corruption from growing faster than he uproots them, surely there is a speed of action that will get somewhere without—pardon the metaphor—throwing the Goddess of Liberty over the dashboard the first time the front wheels strike a rut in the road.

Meanwhile the unearned increment of the nation's undeveloped wealth continues to "increme," and the question is: Who shall reap this wealth that no man soweth, Wall Street or the people?

A Few Paraphrases

By WEX JONES

NOW glory to our sovereign liege, King Henry of Navarre! Let us make a racket and have a bit of a dance through thy cornfields green, O, pleasant land of France. [Pleasant land of France doesn't answer—line busy, perhaps.] And thou New Rochelle, our suburban New Rochelle, proud suburb of the actors, again let rapture light the eyes of all thy mourning commutors. Cold and stiff and still are they—with the exception of the New York, New Haven & Hartford bunch — that wrought thy walls annoy. Rah! Rah! Rah! Rah! a college yell for Henry of Navarre.

Oh, but we felt nervous when the alarm clock went off and we saw the army of the League drawn out in long array. As we looked on it we thought of Jack Johnson and the hope of the white race, and we swore to fight like the dickens for Kid Navarre. And here the Kink has come to marshal us, all togged up in his fighting clothes, with a snow-white plume upon his gallant Stetson. He grinned at us and said: "Gee, this looks like a real shindy, and the best thing you can do is to follow the lid of Navarre."

Whirroo! the foes are movin'; hear the noise they're making with fifes and steeds and trumps and drums and roaring culverins—something like a New York street when the pushcart men get busy. Now, by the lips of those ye love, fair gentlemen of France, charge for the golden lilies now—upon them with the lancet. A thousand spurs are striking deep—much to the discomfort of the horses—and the whole bunch takes it after the skypiece of Navarre. Well, thank goodness, the day is ours. Mayenne hath turned her ankle. D'Aumale hath cried for a quarter; the Flemish Count hath got the raus. The field is all cluttered up with horses and flags and cloven mail and cleft males. We all yelled, "Remember St. Batholomew"; but out spoke gentle Hank: "No Frenchman is my foe; hand it to the other guys, but nix on pasting our own blokes." Oh, was there ever such a knight in friendship or in war as our sovereign lord, King 'Enery, the scrapper of Navarre.

Ho, girls in Vienna, and hi! girls in Lucerne, turn on the weeps, for they never come back. And all you fellows in the League, look out that your cannisters are oiled, for there's the deuce to pay, and it's all on account of our jolly old pal, Kink 'Enery of Navarre.
